Emotions run high at hearing on prison

Emotions ran high and at one point threatened to erupt into violence Tuesday night as about 60 area residents met with James Walsh, director of the Missouri Department of Social Services, to air their views about the possibility of locating one of two new medium security prisons in the Sikeston Area.

Walsh told the group, which was composed predominantly of opponents of locating the prison in the area, that Gov. Joseph Teasdale "has made absolutely no commitment" to any site. Walsh, who will recommend his choice of sites to the governor, said the governor has the final say in the decision, and no sites in Sikeston have been proposed or looked at.

The discussion, which took place in the Sikeston High School Cafetorium, became heated when Fred Steward Jr., 218 Kramer Drive told Walsh he had heard rumors that someone influential with Gov. Teasdale had been given money to support the prison.

Walsh apparently interpreted the remark to be directed at him and asked Steward to name the person he referred to. When Steward refused, Walsh said "you have impugned my integrity," and Steward denied that he had meant the remark to refer to Walsh.

After a few more remarks, Walsh told Steward he did not want to discuss the matter further with him, and both men calmed down.

Several persons in the audience remarked that only a few prison supporters were present at the meeting. Keith Ziegenhorn, a prison supporter, said many supporters had purposely stayed away from the meeting to give the opposition a chance to state their opinions.

Others wondered why Walsh had not been asked to present the facts about the prison earlier, when Sikeston was first suggested as a possible site. Former Mayor Don Fulton said Walsh had been invited to speak several weeks ago but, because he is visiting so many other communities, he was unable to speak here until now.

The Rev. Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright spoke briefly on behalf of prison supporters, whom he said acted in what they thought were the best interests of the community. He said he had no knowledge of anyone attempting to influence the governor's decision illegally.

After the meeting, Walsh told a group of reporters after hearing the remarks at the gathering, he believed the community's acceptance of the prison to be very low and that this would not be favorable to Sikeston's selection as a site.

Walsh also said he received the impression that many of those attending felt they had been deceived about the prison by those who support it.

Walsh favors locating the prison in the urban areas of the state, but told the group the state may not find suitable sites there because of such factors as prohibitive costs.

Walsh said he plans to make a recommendation for the western part of the state to Teasdale by Friday. His recommendation for the eastern part of the state will be made by the end of May.

The Social Services director says about 100 communities have invited him to present the pros and cons of the medium security prison in public meetings like the one here. The prison would house up to 500 inmates.

Several communities have offered free land for the prison.

Walsh said he learned Tuesday that Steele has deeded 200 acres of land to the state for a possible prison site.

Walsh first told the audience what factors are looked for in the selection of a site. He said there must be access to a sufficient number of employes for the prison, then estimated that the medium security prison to be erected in the eastern part of the state would employ 225 persons.

Access to the site via roads and railroads is another consideration, as is the site itself, which must be suitable for water and electric lines.

A fourth factor – community acceptance is one which Walsh says is important, but he added, "We don't need 100 per cent acceptance." He said acceptance by the community is important mainly for the well-being of prison employes and has no effect in the area of inmates.

Walsh presented the negative aspects of the prison first. He said 100 per cent of the inmates of the prisons are felons, with about 50 per cent having committed serious crimes against person and the others having committed crimes against property. Few are first offenders.

But he also said the inmates in a medium security prison "have shown over the course of their confinement some improvements," as opposed to those in a maximum security prison who have shown no improvement and require constant surveillance.

Walsh said the greatest negative and the one which influences most persons about the prison negatively is the possibility of an escape. He did not deny that escapes occur.

"We will have an escape," he said. He told the group the medium security prison at Moberly has two escapes annually and an average of three a year are "walk off" escapees who leave work programs they have been assigned to.

Generally, Walsh said, escapees will steal a car and try to get as far away from the prison area as possible. But he admitted it is a possiblility that inmates could enter a home and terrorize citizens.

Walsh said that, while he sees no problem with the fact that 51 per cent of the inmates would probably be black and consequently would have about that proportion of black visitors to the prison, it might be a problem to the community.

He described three plans for recruiting minority groups to work in the prison. His plan, the Walsh plan, is to try to recruit the same proportion of minority employes as are incarcerated in the prison.

One young black woman said she considered herself a member of a minority group because she was black and female and that she would rather stay as poor as she is than work in a prison. Another man asked why the Sikeston area should bear the burden of the prison's location when many of the employes could come from Cape Girardeau or another area towns. Many of the remarks were punctuated by applause.

While the problem of minority families moving to an area to be near an inmate might be considered a negative, Walsh says he has seen the situation only in the movies and doubts it would occur. He also said the prison, in his opinion, would have no effect on property values, prostitution or drug traffic outside the prison.

Prison identification with the city could also be considered a negative by some persons.

On the positive side, Walsh pointed out that the prison would cost an estimated $21 million to build, with a lot of local labor hired in construction-related fields. The prison would provide an annual payroll of $2.5 million and another $1 million for prison supplies. Walsh could not say how much of the money for supplies would go to the immediate area.

Other positive factors mentioned were the additional taxes the employes would bring to the area and the opportunity persons in the community would have to donate their time to working with the inmates.

Several persons throughout the meeting expressed concern that the community's attitude would not be considered when the governor chose a prison site in the eastern part of the state.

Walsh replied that community acceptance definitely is a factor, and said the citizens should make their views known to their state senators and representatives. While the straw vote taken in the April 5 city election will be considered, Walsh said the entire southeast Missouri area, not just Sikeston, is being considered. In that vote 1,783 persons voted against the prison and 663 supported its location in the area.

Housing board retains policy

The Housing Authority Board Tuesday voted to retain its policy that women with illegitimate pregnancies must move out of Housing Authority units.

Housing Authority Board chairman Charles Mitchell told The Daily Standard that the vote was a tie between the four board members present at the meeting, but declined to say how specific members voted. In case of a tie vote, the ruling stands, Mitchell said.

Other members of the Housing Authority Board are Richard James, Cathleen Gipson, Merlin Hagy and Kenneth Dement.

The Housing Authority Board had received a letter from the Sikeston City Council expressing their displeasure with the ruling. One tenant being forced to move contacted the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, and the department said it would pay the legal expenses if the tenant wishes to sue the housing authority.

A referendum among Housing Authority residents showed tenants answering were fairly evenly divided about the policy.

Thief hits city hall

MARSTON — A safe burglary at the Marston City Hall sometime after midnight Tuesday netted thieves $35 in coins, $327 in bills and an undetermined amount of checks, according to New Madrid County Deputy Sheriff Sam Hinton.

The stolen checks were made out to the City of Marston and to Associated Natural Gas Company. Hinton said the safe had been pried open.

Entrance was gained by going through the fire station, which Hinton said had been unlocked, and then a hole had been knocked into a door that led into the adjoining City Hall office.

No clues or suspects had been turned up early this morning.

The break-in was discovered at 7:30 a.m. today by City Marshal Fred Lovins.

Police looking for con man

EAST PRAIRIE — Police are seeking a man believed to be 28 to 30 years old, about 5 feet, 6 inches tall, with blonde curley hair, who reportedly attempted to get money from two elderly residents Tuesday.

Police chief Jake Abner said he received a call Tuesday morning from the elderly women who said the man came to their home, telling them that he could get their social security benefits increased if they would give him $150 to $180 each. Both women refused and called authorities, Abner said.

The man was described as being well dressed and drving a new beige colored car

Completion is expected in mid-June

A new shell building being constructed in Sikeston to attrack industry is expected to be completed by mid-June, Howard Gipson, vice president of Ryan Construction Company, 490 Davis Blvd., announced Tuesday.

Gipson and Bill Wellborn, executive vice president of the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce, released copies Tuesday of an artists conception of the new shell building.

The new building is located on Highway 57, northwest of the new Missouri State Highway Patrol Satellite Station. The building's foundation, footings and 75 per cent of the dirt fill have been completed. Masonry work is expected to begin "possibly next week," Gipson said.

Wellborn, said plans are being made for a visit Tuesday to Jefferson City by a representative of Ryan Construction Company and possibly David Friedman, chairman of the Chamber's Industrial Development Committee, and Wellborn to present the plans and information to the Missouri Division of the Department of Commerce and Industrial Development staff.

The state staff will take the information and artist's conception and compile it into a brochure, Wellborn said, which will be sent to approximately 800 industrial Realtors to show what Sikeston has to offer.

Wellborn said the balance will be mailed with a cover letter by the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce to the top 10 Kansas City and St. Louis industries. The selection of the top 10 will be made by a computer at the state office of the Department of Commerce and Industrial Development.

Blueprints for the shell building were drawn by Whitworth, Foust and Stearnes, Inc. of Sikeston.

Nation's economy improving

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy apparently expanded at a rate of about 4.5 per cent in the first three months of this year, nearly double the gain of the previous three-month period, government economists say.

The increase, calculated at an annual rate, is encouraging to the Carter administration. These same economists were predicting just a few weeks ago that first-quarter economic growth would be less than 4 per cent because of the hard winter.

Four per cent growth is considered the level necessary to keep unemployment from increasing. Gains above that level should reduce the nation's jobless rate, which was 7.3 per cent in March.

A strong economic rebound in March improved the economic outlook, several economists said Tuesday. They said it was fueled partly by advance spending by consumers of the $50 rebates they have expected from Washington.

They said that if Congress now fails to approve the rebates, consumers might slow their spending and reverse the gains of the first quarter.

The Commerce Department will release official figures on first-quarter economic growth, as reflected by the nation's gross national product, on April 20.

As recently as March 30, Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps said GNP growth would be less than 4 per cent, at an annual rate, in the first quarter.

But Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Tuesday he thinks the economy is now growing at a rate of between 4.5 to 4.75 per cent, and economists said Mrs. Kreps is now being provided with new information from her advisers showing a rate of growth above 4 per cent.

The economy grew at only a 2.4 per cent rate in the final three months of 1976.

An economist who did not want to be identified said the figures on consumer borrowing and spending show that consumers are willing to go into debt to buy things. He traced this development to the anticipation by consumers that they can repay their borrowing with the rebates they receive.

While a $50 rebate per person doesn't seem like much, he said, it translates into a $200 rebate for a family of four. "That's not enough for a down payment on a new car, but it will buy a television set, a washing machine or a new suit of clothes," he said.

R-6 approves personnel

The Sikeston R-6 Board of Education Tuesday went into closed session before approving 109 probationary personnel and 17 persons in administrative positions for employment for the 1977-78 school year.

In other action, the board swore in new member Robert L. Mitchell Jr., 513 Salcedo Road, and welcomed him as a new member.

Sikeston Superintendent of Schools Sam Harbin told the board a tentative school calendar for the 1977-78 school year would be presented for study by May 10, with a tentative bsdget also being presented at that time.

Harbin also asked board members to be aware of a bill, Missouri 707, that is before the Missouri Senate and is expected to pass. The bill would allow any public employe who has been terminated to apply for unemployment benefits. Harbin says that in the event the bill passes, the schools will have to provide for insurance for the compensation.

Harbin also expressed concern about a challenge to registration or course fees which occurred Monday when the Missouri Supreme Court overturned the dismissal by Pemiscot County Circuit Judge Rex Hensen of a suit by a parent group seeking to end the fee system in Caruthersville School District 18.

The Circuit Court has been ordered to reschedule the case for trial. Harbin told the board that the Sikeston Public Schools collect about $10,640 per year in incidental fees.

Postage reporting to parents and the Barker, the high school newspaper are among some of the items funded by the fees.

At the meeting, the board also recognized six school nurses present for their performance in the system. Rachel Jacobs, who will be leaving the Sikeston Public School this year, was thanked for her years of service to the community.

A few grownots were in rare form last night as they exploded with emotionalism showing the Director of Social Services of the State of Missouri, James Walsh what fine representatives of the citizens of Sikeston we have.

There will always be those citizens who are for and those who are against an issue and it should be that way because Americans have a choice but the hostility that was shown toward Walsh was uncalled for and just plain rude.

Walsh explained that he was in Sikeston by invitation to explain the pros and cons of a medium security prison. Not to sell or unsell the prison but to explain the pros and cons.

It was evident by some of the questions that a few people don't remember what they read in the paper and that they don't remember what they are being told. One woman challenged Walsh to know why he waited so late to come to Sikeston, like he did it on purpose so those against the prison wouldn't have as good a chance to impress him with their view as those for the prison and why the newspaper only carried the pro prison view. If this woman could remember more than just what she wanted to remember she would remember reading in the Standard about statments and meetings BOTH for and against the prison. She also would remember reading about the meetings that other towns had where Walsh explained the prison issue starting with the Western side of the State working his way across to the East side.

Don Fulton, mayor at the time the invitation was extended, said that Walsh had a busy schedule and couldn't come to Sikeston until April but that the invitation was extended about eight weeks ago.

Those who are against the prison and want to remain so should stay against the prison but I believe that everybody who attended the public meeting last night whether for or against the prison should feel ashamed of the way that some of the citizens of Sikeston received the Director of the Department of Social Services.

HEARTS ARE TRUMPS

Afraid of heights, I had always avoided airplane trips. Now I faced my first flight. My employer had chosen me to attend a writers' workshop in New York, but could only spare me a few days. The thought of taking off, unaccompanied, of changing planes in Atlanta, had my stomach in knots. How would I know what to do? Suppose I got airsick?

While I thought of declining the trip, my good friend Mildred chatted gaily about flying down in two weeks to visit her sister in Florida. "That's fine for you," I thought bitterly. "You know how to fly."

Several times before my reservations were made, Mildred asked about my schedule. When I knew, I told her on what flight I would leave Huntsville, Ala., on the way to Atlanta. Later that day, she telephoned me. "What do you think?" she said. "We're on the same plane to Atlanta."

"But you were going a week later," I said.

"I changed my mind," she said brightly. "Now we can fly at least part of the way together." What I had dreaded turned out to be a wonderful experience, because of the kndness of a friend.

COFFEE BOYCOTT?

We wonder how many people will stop buying coffee, since the price has started shooting up.

Remember a while back when the same thing happened to sugar? It was right at Christmas time, as we recall, when a lot of ladies were embarking on their Christmas baking projects.

And, a number of them cut down.

Coffee is sort of a "staff of life" in the U.S. We'd be curious to know how many cups are imbibed in Clinton each day...the total would be astounding, we'd imagine.

Perhaps we'd all do well to switch to tea. (Not that we want to). We've always enjoyed reading about the ritual of the teapot in the "fancier" homes in the U.S. and overseas, too.

The English have their tea-breaks, just as we have our coffee breaks.

Well, if coffee keeps going up, it may soon be quite an honor to get an invitation to "a coffee." Just like, with the high cost of first class postage, we were flattered to get Christmas cards this past Yuletide. We didn't know so many folks were willing to spend 13 cents to mail us a "Merry Christmas" greeting and it left us feeling pretty good.

When the Clinton water started tasting so lousy last fall, a few friends told us they just might switch to wine. If the water didn't prompt their switch, maybe the price of coffee will. However, not being an afficianado of the grape, we pass.

High-rise hog farms? No, it's not a joke. That's just one of the developments forecasted for the future by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers.

The group also predicts farming of the seas and orbiting farms in space.

"Sometime, perhaps by century 22, agricultural production will be relegated to locations in orbiting space stations," wrote Richard Phillips of the Agricultural Engineering Department of the University of Missouri. "There, all aspects of the environment can be matched completely to the needs of the animals and crops within each structure."

PRESIDENT CARTER URGED TO FORM ENERGY POLICY

President Carter has been urged by industry to give full support to development of a national energy policy so that the U.S. can go forward with "the massive task to achieve energy self-suffiency."

In a position paper submitted to the President, the National Association of Manufacturers pointed out:

"Oil imports have increased by 1 million barrels per day above last year's level and now account for more than 40 per cent of our oil needs. This ominous statistic is made vastly more significant by the fact that Arab nations, which embargoed the U.S. three years ago when they were supplying 22 per cent of our oil imports, are now supplying 37 per cent of our oil imports.

Foreign Dependency

"Our foreign dependency is increasing while our own oil and natural gas production is decreasing. Our demand for energy is likely to increase between 35 to 40 per cent by 1985. There are no guarantees that anothe Arab oil embargo will not take place.

"We still do not have a national energy policy."

Policy Objectives

Objectives of such a national energy policy, the NAM told the President, should include:

— Priorities spelled out to reflect a balanced and wise set of choices from available alternatives.

— Encouragement of the petroleum industry to finance a continuing search for oil and gas on the scale necessary to maximize the nation's output.

— A realistic approach to surface coal mining should be adopted.

— For nuclear power plants, expeditious siting and licensing procedures should be developed.

The NAM position paper to the Carter Administration, in regard to nuclear power, said:

"Perhaps the greatest intermediate source of energy is nuclear power generation. Governmment- sponsored programs should emphasize advanced reactors offering environmental resource advantages, development and demonstration of fast breeder reactors, research on other new types of reactors and on nuclear fusion.

"The regulatory and economic climate should encourage uranium mining to develop low-cost, domestic uranium reserves. The capacity of uranium enrichment facilities should be greatly increased and steps should be taken toward private ownership of existing and new facilities...

"There is a need to define and disseminate information about the actual extent of risk from potential radiation in order to eliminate objections based on emotion rather than on fact."

Role of Electricity

"Electricity," the NAM said, "is a secondary form of energy generated through the conversion of fuels and other primary energy sourves.

"In the absence of a presently unforeseen major technological breakthrough, vastly increased quantities of all basic fuels — coal, oil, gas and uranium — will be required to generate electrical energy in this country.

"The proportion of each basic fuel will depend upon many factors, such as environmental requirements, technological developments, costs and a variety of competitive considerations.

"The electric utility industry is greatly expanding its research nd development effort. Government research in the energy field should ge coordinated with this program.

"The basic responsibility for generation, transmission and distribution of electric power in the U.S. should rest with private industry. Where government is the owner of power-generating facilities, such as multiple-purpose hydro-electric facilities, the energy produced should be sold at wholesale on equal terms..."

SOVIET TREATY VIOLATIONS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

Americans should rejoice, not mourn, at the collapse of the strategic arms negotiations in Moscow. It is unlikely that any agreement that could have been reached would have been advantageous to us militarily, and it is almost certain that any agreement would have been disadvantageous psychologically.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance would not have been so surprised at the Kremlin's abrupt rejection of our proposals if he had kept on his desk a quotation from a great American phrasemaker, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes: "A page of history is worth a volume of logic."

Our diplomats were apparently relying on their own logic that "the Soviets want an arms control agreement just as much as we do" and "it's in the Soviet's self-interest to sign a treaty limiting nuclear weapons." "A page of history," plus Al Smith's still-valid maxim "let's look at the record," would have braced our State Department for their verbal confrontation with Soviet negotiators.

Reliance on nonaggression treaties with the Soviet Union is the most fatal mistake any country can make. In 1964 the Senate Internal Security subcommittee completed a lengthy study of the Soviet record of treaty violations. The conclusion was that the Soviets have violated every major agreement they ever entered into, except the August, 1939, agreement they signed with Adolf Hitler which started World War II.

A separate research study was made by the distinguished historian Dr. Anthony Bouscaren. He listed 93 major treaty violations committed by the USSR.

Soviet doctrine is wholly in harmony with Soviet practice. As Lenin stated the principle, "Promises are like piecrusts, made to be broken." Stalin's description was just as colorful: "Good words are a mask for concealment of bad deeds. Sincere diplomacy is no more possible than dry water or iron wood."

The speed record for treaty-breaking was set on Aug. 20, 1968, when the Red army invaded Czechoslovakia with 600,000 troops. The Soviets had signed a treaty guaranteeing Czechoslovakia's "independence" and "freedom" only 17 days before.

Soviet treaty doctrine reached its most sophisticated implementation in the SALT I agree ments of 1972.

They were cleverly crafted with one-way loopholes that only the Soviets could exploit.

First, the SALT I agreement restricted only new fixed-base ICBM launchers. The Soviets adamantly refused to include mobile ICBM launchers. Within several months of the SALT I signing, the Soviets began testing their new SS-16 mobile ICBMs. The United States has no mobile missiles, not even under development.

Second, the SALT I prohibition against a more than 15 per cent enlargement of ICBM silo dimensions was supposed to be a "safeguard" against converting "light" missiles into "heavy" missiles. Immediately after the SALT I signing, the Soviets started testing three new types of ICBMs, all far more powerful than the older missiles they replaced.

Third, SALT I restricted merely the number of launchers, not the number of missiles, thereby putting no restraint on reloads. Immediately after SALT I was signed, the Soviets unveiled their new "cold-launch" or "pop-up" technique which makes reloads practical to stockpile. Since we have no cold-launch-type ICBMs and are not developing any, we cannot use reloads.

The Soviets are obviously stalling on SALT II until they can devise a new series of one-way loopholes to bind us, but not them.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Fun and Games in the Bahamas

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- A wealthy American plotted to assassinate two leaders of the Bahamas shortly before the Caribbean islands gained independence from Great Britain, according to confidential intelligence reports.

The audacious murder plot against Premier Lynden Pindling and Deputy Premier Arthur Hanna is chronicled in classified reports prepared by the Internal Revenue Service.

The "financial backer of this plan has been identified as a wealthy American citizen," who owned a hotel on an island in the Bahamas, the report declares. The hotel financier, whose name was expunged from the IRS documents, believed he had been shaken down for a "political contribution" to Pindling's political campaign in 1972. Because he refused to contribute, the American alleged, his hotel was burned down by "politically motivated arson."

The American tried to purchase "Thompson-submachine guns and ... M-1 rifles" through a cohort, the report continues. The arms were to be used "in connection with a plot to assassinate Pindling and Hanna."

The alleged plot in 1973 came at a time when some Bahamans believed that the United States was secretly aiding anti-Pindling dissidents. The IRS, which had been investigating American tax havens in the Bahamas, provided the assassination information to Bahaman authorities to dispel this view.

Footnote: The IRS files were in records provided to Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D.-N.Y. His Consumer Affairs subcommittee was investigating IRS projects relating to tax havens.

Petroleum Parley: Stuart Eizenstat, the scholarly, soft-spoken White House domestic policy chief, privately disagrees with President Carter's emerging energy policy.

Conservative energy czar James Schlesinger has been urging Carter to deregulate the price of natural gas. But in a private interview with us, Eizenstat called deregulation "a Republican policy."

Yet Eizenstat's personal philosophy hasn't deterred him from mingling with the energy industry's lobbyists. For example, former Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody, now a top nuclear lobbyist, has regular access to Eizenstat and the White House. The domestic chief also has asked Sun Oil officials to analyze federal studies.

Another oil and gas group used Eizenstat's old Atlanta law firm to try to influence the White House. The meeting with oil economists and lawyers in February was suggested by Will Cain, a Texas natural gas executive and a Carter campaign fund-raiser. The parley was actually set up by Mobil Oil representative Frank Love, a former law partner of Eizenstat's.

The oil and gas men fervently argued for increased coal use and energy price hikes. While Carter's energy plans include some of their proposals, Eizenstat insists the meeting didn't influence the president's decision. He said he was simply hearing the industry's side of the argument. Love and Cain also told us they were only trying to give Eizenstat the industry's point of view.

Oil to Japan?: Many congressional Democrats are trying to stop the oil companies from jacking up profits by selling Alaskan oil to Japan.

In order to push through the Alaskan pipeline, petroleum firms swore that North Slope oil was desperately needed in the United States, which now imports 38 per cent of its oil from Arab nations. Both the government and the people were promised that the pipeline would funnel the vital oil solely into the continental United States.

But on the West Coast, there will soon be a glut of oil when the Xlaskan pipeline reaches full production. "About 700,000 barrels of oil per day in excess of its needs will reach California," says a confidential briefing paper prepared for Rep. John Dingell's Energy Subcommittee.

This West Coast oil surplus has been expected for years, our sources say, yet the oil companies have not built refineries or pipelines to process the expected flow of Alaskan oil. Thus there is no way to ship the fuel to the energy-starved Midwest and East Coast.

An internal Federal Energy Administration document suggests that "the oil companies were cognizant of the surplus at the time the decision was made to build the pipeline across Alaska, rather than across Canada (to the Midwest) and nevertheless proceeded ... with the intention of exporting any surplus crude to Japan."

The oil companies and some White House officials want to trade the Alaskan oil to Japan in exchange for an equal amount of Saudi Arabian oil. The Saudi oil would be carried by tanker from the Persian Gulf to the East Coast. This would make the United States even more dependent on Arab imports.

The swapping arrangement would be quite profitable for the oil companies. Alaskan oil refined and sold in the United States would probably sell at a much cheaper price than the Arabs now charge for their oil. However, the industry can sell Alaskan oil to Japan at much higher prices.

Rep. John D. Dingell, D.-Mich., is fighting to keep the Alaskan oil in the United States and would rather delay its production than ship it to Japan. Meanwhile, the fracas has been joined by Alaskan Gov. Jay Hammond, who has secretly written President Carter asking him to allow higher prices for Alaskan oil.

Footnote: Oil company spokesmen deny they would make extra profits by selling Alaskan oil to Japan. They maintain that they are trying to increase refining and pipeline capacity on the West Coast.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Not Peanut Politics:
Carter begins apologizing to National Labor Chiefs

WASHINGTON— An angry labor chief, bitter over President Carter's refusal to deliver on campaign promises to labor, turned to a visitor here the other day and sputtered, "March was National Peanut Month and Jimmy has been playing the old political shell game with us. But just wait."

This was the kindest thing union officials have said of the White House in the past few days. The President has been accused by the labor men of playing a "cruel joke" on shoe workers. His minimum wage proposal has been reviled as "shameful and indecent." He has been told bluntly that labor shouldn't have backed him in '76.

And a spokesman for embattled labor president George Meany said, "Things are getting worse and worse" between the administration and the movement.

And then Jimmy Carter turned the other cheek.

For example, on Tuesday, April 5, a White House staffer telephoned the AFL-CIO's Public Employees Department (PED). He asked for a list of the 350 delegates to their two-day, end-of-March first national legislative conference at the Hyatt Regency Hotel here. The White House wanted to send all of them a letter of apology. Why?

Here's what happened. Mr. Carter's congressional liaison man, Frank Moore, had taken the microphone at their Wednesday (March 30) breakfast about 9 a.m., after having eaten well. He had begun his speech on how the President favored an amendment to the Hatch Act giving public employes the right to run for office and engage in politics, long denied them.

Suddenly, five minutes into the talk, Moore turned to PED president, the firefighters' William H. McClennan, and said, "Howie, I can't continue. Must get back to the White House. I have a message. You tell them."

"Them" were 350 delegates, 15 Senators and 60 House members-- all invited to demonstrate the prestige of the new AFL-CIO public workers' department.

McClennan, the newest of AFL-CIO national vice presidents, suddenly lost his characteristic ebullience. He was caught with his political suspenders down. He snapped at Moore, "No, you tell them." Moore shoved his speech into his pocket. He walked out, leaving an audience startled by this seemingly rude and unprofessional behavior. He wouldn't permit the speech to be read by anyone else. Nor did his staff send along a copy, despite eight subsequent requests by McClennan and his staff.

Six days later, the White House called for the list of 350 PED representatives from across the nation– explaining that an apology would be sent to each of them.

This was on the day (April 5) labor's big guns zeroed their oratorical artillery in on President Carter himself. The attacks began early this week at a conference of the federation's Industrial Union Department (IUD). The biggest gun was labor's presidential heir apparent Lane Kirkland, national secretary-treasurer, the house intellectual. Said Kirkland, in the bluntest warning since he and Mr. Carter had a go at each other in Georgia last December: "Though it is yet early in the game, the recent signs and portents lead us to wonder if our support was not just another triumph of hope over experience."

Obviously the President was being told he was not the candidate labor should have backed last year. But again Mr. Carter turned the other cheek. The Tuesday attack came with deliberate impact, just 24 hours before labor's high command was due for a long White House luncheon conference with Jimmy Carter, Vice President Fritz Mondale, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and even their public enemy No. 1, economist Charles Schultze. But the President didn't wash out the date he had hurriedly set up with Meany, Kirkland and 13 other members of the AFL-CIO Executive Council – including the powerful legislative committee. For good political measure, Mr. Carter also invited the United Auto Worker's incoming president Doug Fraser.

Jimmy, in his finest fashion, smiled all the while, and with his idea man, Stu Eizenstat, listened for well over an hour. Then the union chiefs dispersed to do their thing.

Each had their assignments to pressure Congress. Each determined not to take for granted the President's newest promises.

Back at the AFL-CIO headquartrs in its own suite, the brand-new special federation task force on labor law reform was moving into action under a very polished hard hat. The force's director is ex-lobbyist, ex-Georgetown University faculty man Vic Kamber, on loan from Bob Georgine's Building and Construction Trades Department (AFL-CIO), determined to avenge the situs picketing defeat.

He won't want for operating cash. Beginning May 1, each of the federation's 14.5 million members will be taxed a penny apiece per month until $800,000 is raised. Also, Meany has called on all affiliates to provide logistic support. And the task force will have its own lobby operation, its researchers and public relations specialists.

The union chiefs, regardless of what Jimmy the Greek says, will give you odds that they will put through their version of a $3-an-hour minimum wage and not the White House's lower proposal of $2.50. Further, the 54-year-old Lane Kirkland has said: "We will still have a very good shot at getting 14b (Taft-Hartley's clause which permits state bans on union shops – VR) repealed." Earlier he avowed that this is "one of the toughest fights we have ever been in."

And one influential national labor chief observed. "Lane is speaking for Big Daddy (Meany -- VR) and now we all have our necks on the line. Jimmy Carter doesn't easily forget or forgive. Everything we say now can be used against him in 1980."

Mr. Carter appears to have a compulsion on starting his presidential races early. Neither side is playing for peanuts. Regardless of what you hear, both sides are going for broke politically.

Today's news in brief

Teasdale dumps Galmiche

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale says he will launch a new "talent search" for an insurance director after changing his mind and dumping John Galmiche as his choice for the job.

"I do not believe my superintendent of insurance should be John Galmiche," Teasdale said on Tuesday. "I think I need someone with more knowledge of the industry."

Galmiche, 29, of St. Louis County, was named to head the insurance division in March. An investigation by the Senate Gubernatorial Appointments Committee revealed that Galmiche, who is general manager of the St. Louis Stars professional soccer club, was convicted of 12 traffic violations between June 24, 1966 and Sept. 20, 1976.

It was not the traffic offenses themselves that made Teasdale change his mind, the governor said, but the way in which they came to light. Teasdale said he didn't feel right after that about submitting Galmiche's name to the Senate.

Import TV prices may go up

NEW YORK (AP) — The price tag on that fancy $600 color television set you've been saving for — with the "made in Japan" label — might be marked up to $740. A U.S. Customs Court has ordered the government to raise import duties on televisions and other electronic goods imported from Japan by 15 to 25 per cent to offset a competitive advantage given to Japanese exporters by their government. A Justice Department spokesman said the ruling will be appealed, a move that could put off any price increases for years.

FDA views saccharin as drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration, which has enraged diabetics and weight-watchers with its proposed ban on saccharin, wants to allow continued sale of the artificial sweetener as a nonprescription drug. The FDA still plans to ban saccharin as an additive in food and beverages, but The Associated Press learned Tuesday that the agency is preparing to recommend that it be available as an over-the-counter drug, like headache remedies and antacids.

Liddy eligible for parole

WASHINGTON (AP) — G. Gordon Liddy, still silent about the Watergate burglary he planned, supervised and botched, can look forward to parole in three months rather than four years through the last-resort intervention of President Carter. With a stroke of a pen, the President did what Gerald Ford wouldn't: he cut Liddy's sentence from 20 years to eight years and thereby made him eligible for parole anytime after July 9.

Economy picks up steam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy apparently expanded at a rate of about 4.5 per cent in the first three months of this year, nearly double the gain of the previous three-month period, government economists say. The increase, calculated at an annual rate, is encouraging to the Carter administration.

Keyes to seek full term

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Democratic State Auditor Thomas M. Keyes, on the job less than three months, announced today that he will seek a full four-year term as auditor.

"As a new face to Missouri politics, I am somewhat unaware of the political pitfalls that lie ahead in the coming 20 months, but I feel that my lack of campaign experience can be erased quickly—the professional experience I can bring to the office will be of more importance," Keyes told newsmen here.

Appointed by Gov. Joseph Teasdale on Jan. 27, Keyes, 63, succeeded Kansas City Democrat George Lehr, who resigned for personal reasons.

Keyes said he had been urged to run for a full term by Lehr and other friends but that Teasdale had not talked to him about it.

Free plates for vets on way

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Totally disabled veterans in Missouri will receive free vehicle license plates beginning this fall under a bill signed into law by Gov. Joseph Teasdale.

"Signing this bill into law makes me happier than anything I've done as governor," Teasdale said during ceremonies in his office on Tuesday.

The new law, the third passed since Teasdale became governor in January, will provide the free vehicle license plates to an estimated 1,350 Missouri veterans. The free plates will become available beginning Sept. 28.

The cost of the program will be $46,000 a year and the plates will have the words "Disabled Veteran" printed on them.

Rep. Glenn Binger, D+Independence, sponsor of the proposal, said it was just a small way for the state to show its appreciation to those injured in the service of America.

Energy plan points reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's energy plan is expected to include an initial increase of five cents a gallon in the federal gasoline tax and a tax of several dollars a barrel on domestically produced crude oil, The Wall Street Journal reported today.

The Journal said the plan Carter is to announce in a message to Congress April 20 also is expected to include:

—A so-called "gas guzzler" tax on auto makers for producing cars that use too much gasoline. The tax would start at $412 a car for the least efficient autos, and eventually could go as high as $2,500 a car.

—An increase in natural gas prices through a rise in federal price control ceiling on gas and a tax on the industrial use of gas. Both measures would be aimed at encouraging the use of coal.

The newspaper said that under the proposed plan the federal tax on a gallon of gasoline could amount to 50 cents within 10 years but that the taxes wouldn't occur if domestic gasoline consumption decreased.

Rabbitt dismissal bid denied

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A motion to dismiss eleven of 15 counts against former Missouri House Speaker Richard J. Rabbitt has been turned down by a federal judge.

A federal grand jury indictment returned March 3 charged Rabbitt with extorting $12,000 from an architectural firm and $20,000 from an automobile dealers' group seeking passage of a tax relief bill. Rabbitt also was charged with mail fraud.

Prosecutors said the alleged offenses occurred while Rabbitt was a state legislator.

Attorneys for Rabbitt recently filed a flurry of motions and Judge John F. Nangle of U.S. District Court ruled on them Tuesday.

In addition to denying the motion to dismiss eleven of 15 counts against Rabbitt, Nangle also rejected Rabbitt's request for a list of government witnesses.

However, Nangle ruled that Rabbitt be furnished with information on any electronic surveillance and that the government begin an investigation to determine if Rabbitt was the subject of a wiretap.

The judge also ordered that Rabbitt can have all written statements Rabbitt made and the substance of any oral statements he made.

The trial is scheduled for May 9.

The recycling program involves the production and sale of canned beer in all-aluminum cans and the redemption of the empty aluminum beverage cans at 10 cents per pound.

A Miller Reclamation Center has been established at the Bess Supply Company warehouse. Empty, all-aluminum cans, whole or flattened, may be redeemed for cash at the center on Saturdays between 10 a.m. and 12 noon starting April 16. All aluminum beverage cans will be returned to can manufacturers for reprocessing.

"We believe this program represents an excellent way to attack our solid waste disposal problem," Bess said. "It provides an operating and readily available recycling route and offers an incentive for collection. Its also a continuing recycling program, representing a long-term commitment. We want to build this collection effort into a permanent and cooperative community effort."

Bess said the Boy Scouts have been invited to join in the program as a fund-raising vehicle, while helping improve the environment.

Miller is scheduling advertising to inform the public about the program and Bess Supply Company has support materials available.

The city of Sikeston is a good place to live and Mary Doggett makes no bones about expressing her views on the community. The newly elected councilwoman attended her first planning meeting with the council Monday night regarding the city budget. (Daily Standard photo)

Sikeston's first council woman says reaction is positive

By Jill Corti

The city of Sikeston wrote another page in its 117- year history last week when it elected its first city councilwoman.

Mary Doggett, 801 N. Kingshighway, was one of two council members elected to serve a full three-year term. She also narrowly missed being chosen as mayor by a 3-2 vote of the council.

Mrs. Doggett and her husband, Dr. John Doggett, a dentist, have four children: Martha, who lives in New Mexico; Laura, who is in Wyoming; Jim, a student at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau; and John David, a student at Sikeston High School.

Coming from a "very Republican family," Mrs. Doggett started her political career as a Republican committeewoman 10 years ago.

Because of her feelings and involvement in scouting, children, schools and because "I really like people," Mrs. Doggett chose to seek the City Council position.

She says that her campaign proved "very rewarding" and she has received many compliments and positive reactions.

When asked how shethought the City Council would react to its first woman member, she replied that she "really doesn't know how they will react."

She did note, however, that she does not think the reaction will be as strong since she will be one of three newly elected council members on a five-member staff.

Mrs. Doggett says she was quite surprised at almost being elected mayor, since she felt certain that a member with tenure would be elected because of previous council experience.

Expressing confidence in Sikeston as "a good place to live," Mrs. Doggett says she has received several complaints against the city's streets and police and fire protection, which she rated good during her campaign.

Being the Scott County Republican Party chairwoman had no bearing on her decision to run for the City Council, but Mrs. Doggett reassuringly replied that she would not have sought the council position if she had thought she would have to give her county position up. She also thinks her Republican Committee membership should be looked upon simply as an organization of which she is a member, like other councilmen are members of other organizations.

The prison site issue is one Mrs. Doggett is against. She's not against it for "fears of inmates" but rather because she believes the prison would not be an "asset for Sikeston." Placing the prison in Sikeston is "too far from a central location for the state and using farmland that is used in producing food is not good for Southeast Missouri," she added.

Presently, Mrs. Doggett is working with David Friedman and Chamber of Commerce Manager Bill Welbourn on a committee to develop a system to welcome new people to town.

A note of humor to the story of Mrs. Doggett's election was the reaction of her father, Hawn Wallis of Millersville, to his daughter serving as a councilwoman. Considered a congenial, pleasant man, Wallis replied that he suspected she would be in for "a lot of headaches."

Hearnes wants investigation documents

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Former Missouri Gov. Warren Hearnes wants more federal documents to prove his investigation by a grand jury was politically motivated.

"We're only at the tip of the iceberg," Hearnes said Tuesday in the wake of disclosure that the White House ordered an FBI investigation of him in 1971.

Hearnes, a Democrat governor from 1965 to 1973, said he would pursue a suit against the Internal Revenue Service asking for documents about the origin of the grand jury probe that began in January 1975.

It was revealed last week that Alexander P. Butterfield, a White House aide, requested an FBI investigation of Hearnes in December 1971 and that FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover complied.

Hearnes learned of the investigation in documents obtained from the U. S. Justice Department under the Freedom of Information Act.

The former governor appeared before the federal grand jury last April and, although no indictments were issued, he has not yet been cleared by U.S. Atty. Bert C. Hurn.

Hearnes ran for the U.S. Senate last fall, losing to Republican Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth.

During the primary and general election campaigns he complained that reports of the federal investigation damaged his election chances.

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

The end of the world is coming soon. Therefore be earnest, thoughtful men of prayer. Most important of all, continue to show deep love for each other, for love makes up for many of your faults. Cheerfully share your home with those who need a meal or a place to stay for the night. God has given each of you some special abilities; be sure to use them to help each other, passing on to others God's many kinds of blessings. Are you called to preach? Then preach as though God himself were speaking through you. I Peter 4:7-11

Mayor proclaims special week

April 17-23 proclaimed Private Property Week

With praise for the pride that citizens of Sikeston take in their community demonstrated by the care they give their homes and property, Mayor Eric Piel has proclaimed April 17-23 as Private Property Week.

In his proclamation, Mayor Piel saluted members of the Sikeston Board of Realtors and commended them for their diligence "to protect every citizen's right to private property ownership." He described the Realtors as "among the chief architects of the economic and civic growth" of Sikeston.

The mayor said members of the board conduct their affairs with such a high degree of professionalism and social responsibility that they "have earned the trust and gratitude of our people." A measure of that trust, he added, has been "uncompromising allegiance to a rigid Code of Ethics" which the Realtors have voluntarily imposed on themselves to the benefit of all who live in the community.

Mayor Piel said the Sikeston Realtors' Board has contributed significantly in many ways to the community's economy. He singled out board membership efforts in finding "and offering secure investment opportunities" and its dedication to "encouraging and promoting private home ownership."

Mayor Piel urged all residents of Sikeston and surrounding areas to join in the observance of Private Property Week. Participation with members of the Sikeston Board of Realtors in programs in civic betterment, he said, will be a way to share recognition of this basic American right with 500,000 Realtors and Realtor-associates throughout the United States.

Energy conservation can benefit tenants

Tenants in apartment houses may think energy conservation is the sole concern of the landlord, especially if utilities are included in the monthly rent. Such an attitude can be a mistake. Though the techniques used to conserve energy, such as installing thick insulation in walls, are primarily designed to benefit the landlord by keeping the costs of heating and cooling within reason, energy conservation benefits tenants as well.

One of the benefits is that comfort levels are easier to maintain with adequate insulation. In many apartments for example, routine windows are a major source of heat loss, which can make rooms drafty and chilly.

Adequate insulation in walls sharply limits the amount of heat that is lost through wall areas. The same applies to windows. Choosing wood windows with insulating glass — two panes of glass with an insulating air space between — cuts down considerably on heat loss through the glass area.

Since wood is a natural insulator, it is an excellent material for the frame and sash of windows. Well-made wood windows also come equipped with factory-applied weatherstripping to assure snug closure. All of the factors that go into the manufacture of a quality-built wood window also serve to maintain indoor comfort by reducing "cold spots" in areas adjacent to windows.

Another benefit that tenants of apartments with quality wood windows with insulating glass get is the virtual elimination of bothersome condensation forming on the glass. Condensation forms on windows when cold outdoor air comes in contact with warm indoor air. The air between the panes of insulating glass acts as a buffer between warm and cold air and helps prevent condensation from forming on the glass.

Area business, civic leaders urged to attend conference

A representative of the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development (CID) was in Sikeston Monday urging area business and civic leaders to attend the 19th annual state Industrial Development Conference slated for May 12 and 13 in Jefferson City.

"This year's program will feature a healthy discussion of Missouri's new International Business Development program," CID spokesman Tim Doke said. "In addition, one entire session will be devoted to a unique simulation game on financing options for industrial projects. The availability of an innovative financing proposal can sometimes be the determining factor in which community an industry selects for its new manufacturing facilities."

Hughes Rudd, CBS News correspondent and New York anchorman of the "CBS Morning News," will address the conference at the May 12 kickoff luncheon. Missouri Governor Joseph P. Teasdale will speak to the evening awards banquet on the conference theme, "Let's Make a Deal."

"The Finance Game" will focus on the financing problems of various sized Missouri communities, ranging from the very small to the large metropolitan areas. Each population category will work on specific case studies of an industry looking for a new location and the financing necessary to complete the project. The game will enable community leaders to explore the various public and private financing options available to new and expanding industry and to select the method most suitable for each particular population category. Professionals in industrial development and financing will be available as resource persons and a discussion of the various solutions will follow the game.

Any persons interested in economic development in Missouri are invited to attend the conference. It will be held at the Ramada Inn on Highway 54 in Jefferson City. Advance registration may be made by writing Industrial Development Conference, P.O. Box 118, Jefferson City, MO 65101, or calling 314-751-4539.

Dear Ann Landers

Husband shows ignorance on taxes

Dear Ann Landers: My doctor told me I would have my baby in April – between the 12th and 17th. This is our first child.

A few weeks ago my husband asked me if I could possibly have the baby by April 15th because we could sure use the tax deduction. Last night I had a few pains and he said, "Gee, wouldn't it be great if the baby was premature?"

This morning did it. He suggested that I move the furniture today – said it might "help us make the IRS deadline."

It burns me up that he puts his child's welfare (and mine) second to a few dollars. Let him have it, Ann. – El Blimpo

Dear Friend: Your husband is not only insensitive, he's ignorant. The deadline for a 1976 tax deduction was December 31st. The April 15th deadline is for filing.

Tell him to relax – and I hope you will, too.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife's mother lived with us for 14 years. She helped with the housework and cooking, and was wonderful with our children. We never considered her a burden. The only time I ever became annoyed with her was when she cut your column out of the paper and I'd find a big hole when I went to read Ann Landers.

My wife has a sister and two brothers. They never gave us a nickel towards Grandma's expenses. We bought her clothes, paid her medical insurance and saw to it that she had a little money in her purse. The last year of her life was very expensive. She was gravely ill.

Grandma's will was probated a few days ago. We didn't know she had anything. To our surprise she owned some blue-chip stocks and had a pile of war bonds from World War II. The estate is not huge but to people like us it looks like a million.

The big question: Grandma left everything to us. The brothers and sister are closing in. They say Grandma wasn't "all there" and it's up to us to "do the right thing." So, Ann, what is "the right thing"? Should Grandma's other children shaqually in the inheritance? – R & L

Dear R & L: The money isn't Grandma's. It's yours. She left it to you – all of it. If you want to share it with a swarm of locusts, go ahead.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is in his late 70s, and not at all well. Many of my women friends are in their early 60s, some widows, others divorced – all looking for husbands.

They think of my husband as a sick old man, and treat him kindly, almost as if he were a child. He misunderstands their attentiveness – imagines himself very attractive, and it's pathetic the way he flirts. The man makes a spectacle of himself every time a woman friend comes to the house.

He doesn't behave this way with the married ones. Could it be a psychological problem? What do you think? – His wife

Dear Wife: Yes. It could also be organic. You say he is in his late 70s. This makes him a candidate for a few small strokes. "Unusual" behavior in people of that age group may be the result of minimal brain damage.

I recommend a thorough check-up for your husband. The findings might reduce your hostility and put a new face on the humiliation.

Clothes are called clue to personality

By HOWARD ULMAN
Associated Press Writer

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — You could get a pretty good idea of an individual's personality merely by observing the clothes he wears for a month, says a professor studying habits of dress.

"I think clothing is a very good means of communication. But if you take one look at a person you may read him wrong. You have to look over a time," Dr. Mary Lou Rosencranz said in an interview.

People must be observed in a variety of settings for a person to get an accurate impression, says the University of Connecticut author of "Clothing Concepts: a Social-Psychological Approach."

Many people don't realize how much they use clothing to communicate with others, says Dr. Rosencranz. People who dress as others in their group may be saying they want to be accepted, while those whose clothing doesn't conform may be asserting their individuality, she says.

A person dressing for a job interview usually takes a conservative approach, she says, "because you're trying to communicate that you're serious-minded."

A young girl, preparing for her first date, might overdo her makeup and wear more mature clothes to present a picture of sophistication to her escort, Dr. Rosencranz says.

"Clothing in first impression is quite important and people do give thought to this," she adds.

Dr. Rosencranz says psychological factors play a key role in how a person dresses.

"Several studies document that extroverted people like brighter colors, the warmer colors," such as red, orange and yellow, she says. Studies show introverted people tend to favor cooler colors, such as blue, green and purple, she adds.

"Some studies have shown that people who are outgoing wear bolder patterns and inhibited people choose smaller patterns," says Dr. Rosencranz who is teaching an undergraduate course on "Clothing and Human Behavior."

Dressing habits might also indicate the mental health of a person, she says.

"People who wear very bizarre, strange things usually have some kind of problem." When people improve their sloppy manner of dress, "this is usually a sign that their self-concept is improving."

The current trend toward jewelry and brighter colors in men's fashions is a sign of male sexual security, she says. "It also means they're following a fashion trend. Other people are doing this."

One clear message conveyed by clothing was that of the hippies during the 1960s, says Dr. Rosencranz. They deliberately dressed in different style from their parents to show they didn't believe the same things, she says.

"Sometimes it's difficult to get a message but that was a pretty clear message."

TB victim worked in lab to help others

By PHYLLIS MENSING
Associated Press Writer

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — Xenia Campbell has just retired from a job that has meant nearly a lifetime of work with the disease that kept her bedridden for 12 years.

Mrs. Campbell entered a tuberculosis sanatorium near Custer, S.D., as a teen-ager in 1927, at a time when the only known cures for the disease were rest or surgery.

Her personal fight was won after 12 years in a hospital bed and after surgery that collapsed one lung. After she recovered, her doctor encouraged her to work in the laboratory at the sanatorium.

"I wanted to be a nurse, but he told me I wasn't strong enough," she said. "But there was an opening in the lab, so I took that."

She met her husband at the sanatorium and they worked in the lab as a team until his death. When the sanatorium closed in 1963, Mrs. Campbell moved to Pierre and has worked in the state health lab for 12 years, analyzing bacteria samples sent by physicians and hospitals.

Mrs. Campbell said she plans to continue an active life when she retires.

"I'll probably miss the work, but I'm not very strong.

"And it should be handled by young people who can keep up with the latest information and continue their schooling," she said.

With tears in her eyes, she said, "I'm just thankful the Lord gave me the chance to do something that I have enjoyed so much."

Heat exhaustion is football practice hazard

CHICAGO (AP) — Heat exhaustion can kill you.

Dr. John D. Burrington of the University of Chicago's Wyler Children's Hospital says that doctors see cases of heat stroke every year among high school football players in training for the fall season.

Dr. Burrington warns especially against exercising strenuously on hot, humid days.

Heat exhaustion is characterized by dizziness, confusion, coma and sometimes death.

"Death results when the body generates heat faster than it can get rid of it and the body overheats," Dr. Burrington says. "The body cools by the evaporation of sweat. Evaporation is slowed by high humidity."

Dr. Burrington suggests limiting strenuous exercise to early morning and late afternoon on hot, humid days, if you must exercise. He also suggests:

Drink plenty of fluids.

Use salt liberally at mealtimes.

Take frequent breaks during exercise.

Avoid tight-fitting clothes such as football pads.

Wear thin cotton in preference to synthetic fabrics.

If you feel faint or confused, he says:

Lie down in the shade.

Loosen tight clothes.

Drink fluids.

If you can, apply cold, wet towels to arms and legs.

The doctor says the victim should be helped to drink liquids if he is able but liquid should never be poured into the mouth of a person who is unable to swallow.

Sight impaired get radio aid

BROOKINGS, S.D. (AP) — More than 60 visually handicapped South Dakotans are expanding their news and literature intake through a new public radio service offered by KESD-FM at South Dakota State University.

Daily broadcasts for registered print-handicapped residents of eastern South Dakota are carried on a special subchannel heard only on specially adapted receivers licensed and provided by the state.

The programs include daily news as it appears in newspapers, novels, short stories, syndicated columns, magazine articles and other specially prepared materials.

Howard Hanson, director of Services to the Visually Impaired and himself blind, said that by the time most people have read a best seller and finished talking about it, a print handicapped person is still waiting for someone to read it to him.

Beats Cardinals 4-0

Seaver humble about shutout

NEW YORK (AP) — According to Tom Seaver, every cloud has a silver lining.

That is, if you call a five-hit shutout a cloud. Seaver did.

"I didn't pitch very well, all things considered," he said Tuesday following his no-walk, five-strikeout effort as the New York Mets won their home opener from the St. Louis Cardinals 4-0. "I was 3-2 on every batter, my control wasn't very good and with a couple of breaks the other way I'm out of there.

"It wasn't a work of art. I had good velocity; I just didn't have very good control. You can't pitch that way consistently against any club. I threw 136 pitches and that's not very good pitching, he said. "The hitter's got the advantage on a 3-2 count. If I didn't have a shutout, I wouldn't have gone out there for the ninth inning. I was dead."

But in his 11th major league season at the age of 32, Seaver seems to have become a philosopher.

"Statistics will lie some times," he said. "There were certain positive things about this game. My change-up was one of them, and I had a good slider, too."

But the best thing of all, strange as it seems, was a hanging curve he threw to Eric Rasmussen in the fifth inning which the St. Louis pitcher whacked off the fence for a double, the Cardinals' only extra-base hit.

What pleased Seaver was the fact that young catcher John Stearns, in his first season as the Mets' No. 1 receiver, called for a curve.

"I had a bad curve ball all day," Seaver said. "I felt I could have struck him out with a fast ball, but John said he wanted me to try and get the curve over. I felt the same way in that situation. It's a very positive point for a young catcher and a seasoned pitcher to be thinking the same thoughts."

"He was struggling with his curve up high," Stearns explained, and it was a good spot to try and get him to drop it down. "I knew it wasn't really the right pitch to throw, but it was an excellent spot because even if you throw a bad curve to a pitcher you may get a strikeout."

It was the Cardinals' first defeat of the season after collecting 28 runs and 38 hits in a three-game sweep of Pittsburgh. Manager Vern Rapp was impressed with Seaver.

"It was the first time I've seen him and he was in command all the way," said the Cards' rookie pilot. "He just went right through us. He does that to teams like the Reds, too, doesn't he? Does that make us as good as the Reds?"

Seaver and Stearns accounted for 75 per cent of the Mets' offense, the pitcher with a two-run single in the second inning and the catcher with a solo homer in the sixth. John Milner homered in the opening inning for the first run. But both batterymates were happier with the shutout than the RBIs.

Parrent gets Camels over the hump

April 12 will be a day Terry Parrent will remember for a long time.

Parrent, Campbell's 6-4 baseball star, did a little of everything for the Camels Tuesday afternoon. The hard-throwing hurler fanned ten Lilbourn batters, scattered five hits and blasted a home run to boot as Campbell stunned Lilbourn 6-1.

In other area games, East Prairie beat Charleston 6-4, Bernie swamped Bell City 17-0, Clarkton downed Greenway, Ark. 11-7, Oran nipped Delta 10-9, Illmo-Scott City nipped Kelly 9-4 and Chaffee beat Scott Central 13-8.

Lilbourn got their only run off Parrent in the first when James Berry tripled in a run, but the Panthers could do little with him after that. The Camels struck with a four spot in the bottom of the first, with Tom Provance and Jeff Philpot clubbing back-to-back doubles to highlight the rally.

Parrent homered off loser James Berry to lead off the fifth and add to the Campbell lead. The Camels added another tally in the sixth.

"We just played some pretty good baseball this time," said Campbell rookie coach Bill Brown. The Camels made only one error and outhit Lilbourn 7-5.

William Johnson clubbed a three-run homer in the fifth for East Prairie to lift them past Charleston 6-4. Terry Wheatley, who got credit for the victory in relief, doubled ahead of Johnson's blast. Wheatley took over on the mound with one out in the third for Johnson, who gave up three of the four Charleston runs.

Bernie hitters had fun as they clobbered Bell City 17-0. Bob Carson, who tossed a one-hitter at the Cubs on the mound, was one of four Bernie players to homer in the five-inning contest. Carson's was a three-run shot, while Roger Carson, Randy Walker and Carl Barnes each struck two-run blows. Walker had Bell City's only hit, a leadoff single in the fourth.

Tony Bizzell ripped three hits to lead Clarkton past Greenway 11-7. Terry Roberts was the winner on the mound for the Reindeer and also got hitting help from Shannon Britt, who homered.

Joey Dial's RBI double in the sixth plated what proved to be the winning run as Oran whipped Delta 10-9. Bill Senciboy homered and singled to drive in three runs and also got crecit for the pitching victory. Dial worked the final inning and a third to close the door on a Delta rally that got them two runs in the bottom of the sixth.

Illmo-Scott City stayed in a first place tie in the Scott-Mississippi Conference with Oran by beating Kelly 9-4. Scott Wadlington earned the mound victory, yielding only four Kelly basehits. David Robert slammed a three-run homer for the losers in the third.

Scott Central rallied for a total of eight runs in the last three innings to turn what looked like a 10-0 Chaffee rout into a more respectable 13-8 decision for the Red Devils. Mickey Eftink started for Chaffee and worked three perfect innings, and Fowler added another before tiring in the fifth. Chaffee's biggest inning was in the second when they plated six runs.

Richard beats Reds

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

J.R. Richard felt he could just throw his glove out on the mound and beat the Cincinnati Reds.

"I felt pretty good," said the Houston pitcher. "I had that positive attitude."

But along with confidence, Richard also had something more palpable in his grip: control. That is a tough combination to beat.

"He just seems to get better and better," said Houston Manager Bill Virdon after watching his right-hander pitch seven strong innings in a 4-3 victory over the Reds Tuesday night.

Richard allowed just five hits, walked only one and retired 14 of the last 16 batters he faced, helping to deal the stumbling Reds their fourth straight loss of the baseball season.

In Tuesday's other National League games, the San Diego Padres nipped the San Francisco Giants 4-3, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Montreal Expos 2-1, the New York Mets blanked the St. Louis Cardinals 4-0 and the Los Angeles Dodgers outscored the Atlanta Braves 14-10.

While Richard was performing his pitching magic, the Astros were pounding Cincinnati starter Pat Zachry for three runs in the first inning and one in the fourth. Enos Cabell's run-scoring triple highlighted the first-inning outburst while Joe Ferguson's RBI single in the fourth proved to be Houston's winning run.

Ken Forsch, who pitched the last two innings for the Astros, gave up Cincinnati's last two runs in the ninth.

Padres 4, Giants 3

Doug Rader's three-run homer led San Diego over San Francisco. Randy Jones, 1-1, last year's Cy Young Award winner, picked up the victory with ninth-inning help from Rollie Fingers. Fingers replaced Jones after Willie McCovey hit a two-run homer that pulled the Giants within one run.

Pirates 2, Expos 1

Rennie Stennett's tie-breaking double in the ninth gave Pittsburgh its victory over Montreal and halted streaks for both clubs. It was the first victory of the season for the Pirates, who had dropped three games to St. Louis.

K.C. fans get benind Royals

KANSAS CITY (AP) — In all the years he's played baseball in Kansas City, Fred Patek had never seen anything like it.

"It really turned us on," said the diminutive Royals shortstop. "The crowd's atmosphere and enthusiasm was better than I can ever remember."

All the players agreed the crowd of 39,460 that watched the Royals defeat the New York Yankees Monday night, 5-4, in a 13-inning home opener was the most vocal and enthusiastic they can remember.

Stadium security policemen agree it was the rowdiest. Several fights erupted, and some beered-up fans directly behind the Yankee dugout became so abusive that New York Manager Billy Martin had to be restrained from going after them.

"They were big fights," said one security cop. "Nasty fights."

"I guess it was their reaction to the shabby treatment the Yankee fans gave us last year in the playoffs," theorized one Royal. "You remember, they were pretty nasty to us in New York."

"I didn't like seeing all the fights," said Patek. "But I sure did like the enthusiasm. Maybe it's the conservative midwestern character, but Kansas City crowds have never been that vocal, that supportive before. It really got us pumped up."

The Royals won the American League Western Division title last season, the first championship in 21 years of major league baseball in Kansas City. They're undefeated in their first four games this year. After an off day Tuesday, they resume their two-game series tonight against the Yankees with left-hander Andy Hassler, 1-0, facing New York's Ed Figueroa, 0-1.

"Winning is kind of infectious," said designated hitter Hal McRae. "I think that's what got the crowd pumped up. Plus, it was a long, cold winter and maybe people were just sort of celebrating the coming of spring.

"But I sure hope the enthusiasm continues. If we keep winning, I think it will."

Patek, who works for a car dealership in the off-season, said he was recognized all over town during the off-season.

"Always before, I could go into a store or a restaurant or wherever and nobody knew who I was," he said. "But not this winter. Everywhere I went, people recognized me.

NBA playoffs open despite officials strike

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Outside Boston Garden, referees Ed Rush, Lee Jones, Manny Sokol and Wally Rooney were manning a picket line, bearing signs which read, "NBA Unfair to Labor."

Inside, however, it was business as usual as the National Basketball Association playoffs opened on schedule. And the Boston Celtics were most businesslike, beginning defense of their NBA title with a 104-94 victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

Guard Charlie Scott, who missed nearly the entire second half of the regular season with two broken bones in his left forearm, sparked the Celtics with 19 points, including seven in a row in a decisive fourth-quarter burst.

"We spurted at the right time and it was just my turn to streak," said Scott.

In other NBA playoff openers, the Detroit Pistons upset the Golden State Warriors 95-90 and the Portland Trail Blazers beat the Chicago Bulls 96-83.

The other best-of-three first-round series begins tonight when the Cleveland Cavaliers and Washington Bullets meet at Landover, Md.

The 24 members of the referees' union remained on strike, so the opening games were refereed by non-union men Richie Powers and Earl Strom and four officials from the pool of backups hastily recruited by the NBA.

Rush, speaking for the four referees who manned the picked line in Boston, said the union hopes to have pickets at as many games as possible. But there were none at the games at Portland or Golden State.

"We don't have the financial resources to fly a couple of dozen men around the country," Rush said, "but we'll continue picketing games throughout the playoffs."

Celtics 104, Spurs 94

Scott scored 13 points in the fourth quarter as Boston, seeking a record 14th NBA championship, pulled away from San Antonio.

Jo Jo White led the Celtics with 24 points. George Gervin and Larry Kenon each scored 20 for the Spurs.

The second game of the series is Friday night at San Antonio.

Pistons 95, Warriors 90

The Pistons erased an 18-point deficit in beating Golden State, holding the Warriors scoreless over the final 6½ minutes. The Pistons can eliminate the Warriors at Detroit Thursday night.

Bob Lanier, who missed 18 games late in the season with a broken hand, led Detroit with 28 points. He put the Pistons ahead 91-90 with a jumper with 4:25 to go, then hit another jumper 2½ minutes later to clinch the victory.

Rick Barry topped the Warriors with 31 points, including 14 in the second period when Golden State raced to a 54-36 lead.

Blazers 96, Bulls 83

Maurice Lucas hit 10 consecutive shots and finished with 29 points for the Blazers, who jumped to a 12-point lead in the first quarter, saw the Bulls pull even 77-77 with seven minutes to go, then pulled away. A jumper by Lucas put Portland ahead to stay.

Mickey Johnson led the Bulls with 19 points. The series resumes Friday night at Chicago.

Improving golfers lose to Bluff

How can a golf coach be happy about a 158-167 loss?

Mike Foster is. His youthful SHS squad dropped a decision to Poplar Bluff Tuesday, but recorded their best team score of the season in doing so.

John Jackovic fired a 37 for Sikeston to tie Bluff's Denis Duncan and Joe Lanning for medalist honors. Jackovic's score was the lowest for any SHS golfer so far this season.

Rounding out the Bulldog scores were Brian Elledge with a 42, Gary Doster with a 45 and Randy Bohanon with a 46.

Jim Pennington had a 43 and Kevin Rudd fired a 45 for Bluff's other scores.

The team meets Cape Central today at the country club.

Time Out

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

It looks as though the St. Louis Blues' life span in this year's Stanley Cup Playoffs is going to be a short one.

Montreal poured it on the Blues 7-2 in the playoff opener Monday night in Montreal. They wasted no time in showing the underdogs who is boss. I'll be surprised if the series lasts more than four games.

The Blues, who received a bye through the first round of the playoffs by winning the Smythe Division, had the misfortune of drawing the Canadiens as their quarterfinal opponent. Montreal's powerhouse this season has been tabbed by many as "the greatest team ever to play hockey." They're playing like it now.

About the best the Blues can realistically hope to do is to win a single game. That in itself would be an accomplishment.

Local St. Louis Cardinal scout Gary Howard has been swamped with phone calls from personals wanting to be on the board of directors of the SeMo Amateur Baseball Hall of Fame.

An error in Sunday's article announce the SABHF said that such persons should contact Howard. Gary says that the story should have said that persons with nominees for the Hall of Fame should call him, not candidates for the board of directors.

Also on the subject of baseball, we got a pleasant surprise in the mail last Friday.

We sent out requests to all National League teams for photos of players to use along with Associated Press stories. The reply from the New York Mets -- the first we have received so far -- will also probably be the nicest.

The Mets not only sent us a complete set of photographs of their players and coaches, but each picture was personally autographed.

Now that's class for you.

While it looks as though it's going to come down to Sikeston and Cape Central for the Class 2-A Regional baseball tournament, it's still way to early to draw any conclusions in 1-A.

It was thought before the season that Chaffee would be a shoo-in for 1-A honors, but the Red Devils have lost three times already -- two to small school teams.

Bernie lost a heartbreaker to surprising North Pemiscot last week, 1-0. The Mules, solid in the pitching department but weak at the plate, are considered a 1-A contender in this district.

Kelly, perenially a strong team on the diamond, is rebuilding this year, going with a lineup dominated by freshmen and sophomores. But the Hawks have knocked off Chaffee and are playing some of the best baseball in the area right now.

Lilbourn, last year's state runner-up in 1-A, were expected to make a run at it again. But the Panthers were stunned by Campbell Tuesday afternoon, 6-1.

Also not to be counted out are Illmo- Scott City and Notre Dame, although both squads will have to develop more consistency in their play to contend for the district crown.

The last week of April and the first week of May will be interesting ones in high school baseball.

The Philadelphia Phillies have a distinction they can do without. They hold the World Series record for consecutive losses by one run. . .the last four in 1915 and the first three in 1950.

Casey Stengel was the manager in more World Series games than any other pilot in baseball history. Casey was at the helm in 63 contests.

Casey Stengel was the winningest manager in World Series history. He won 37 as pilot of the New York Yankees.

The great John McGraw of the New York Giants had the unhappy distinction of losing more World Series games than any other manager, a total of 28.

Eddie Arcaro is the only jockey to ride two Triple Crown winners. Arcaro scored with Whirlaway in 1941 and Citation in 1948.

Correlation was favored for all three Triple Crown events in 1954 and lost them all.

NBC used $5-million-worth of electronic gear in televising Super Bowl XI at Pasadena, Calif. The gear included 20 color cameras, five videotape machines and seven slow-motion replay and stop-action disks.

The New York Jets hold the Super Bowl record for fewest kickoff returns in one game. The Jets only brought back one Baltimore Colt kickoff en route to a 16-7 victory in 1969 at Miami's Orange Bowl.

Two Super Bowl teams have gone through an entire championship game without incurring a penalty. The Miami Dolphins did it against the Dallas Cowboys while losing, 24-3, in 1972. And Pittsburgh also did it against Dallas in 1976 while winning, 21-17.

Big Red name new PR man

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Kevin Bryne, sports information director at Marquette University since May 1974, has been named director of publicity for the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League.

The appointment, effective May 30, was announced today by William V. Bidwill, managing general partner. Bryne succeeds Joe Rhein, who has joined the National Football League as assistant to the National Conference president, George Halas.

Bryne, a 1971 graduate of Marquette, served as sports information director at the University of Missouri-St. Louis from 1971 to 1974.

Cape Central wins dual track meet

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Cape Central, the big school powerhouse in outdoor track and field this year in Southeast Missouri, outclassed Sikeston in a dual meet held Tuesday afternoon at Cape.

The Tigers won handily in both the boys and girls competitions. Central's boys took a 95-45 decision, while the girls were 88-35 victors over the Sikeston coeds.

Central took twelve first place finishes in the boys meet and swept all three places in the high jump and the triple jump as they rolled up 95 points. The bright spots for SHS were Yarber's first in the shot put, Donald Atkinson's victory in the 120-yard high hurdles, John Waltrip's win in the mile, and the two mile, Kevin Goetz's first in the 880.

On the girls side, Dawn Hurley won the 100 and the 220 while topping the Sikeston effort. Kendall also picked up a first place finish for SHS, taking the 440.

Grimsley's SPORTS WORLD

NEW YORK (AP) — If Philip K. Wrigley had not been 82 years old and in the December of a full and productive life, one might deduce that he died of a broken heart.

"Phil's soul was in baseball and there is no doubt about that, like many of us, he was greatly distressed by the trend the game was taking," said M. Donald Grant, chairman of the board of the New York Mets, commenting on the death of the chewing gum magnate who owned the Chicago Cubs.

"His passing would be a sad occurrence under the circumstances but specially unfortunate at this stage when there is so much confusion and dissension. Free agency and high salaries are causing a lot of unhappiness.

"The pendulum will swing back. Baseball is bound to change back to the kind of game Phil Wrigley fought for and envisioned. It is too bad he didn't get to stay around and see it."

Phil Wrigley was one of a vanishing breed, an unshakeable traditionalist who never saw the game as anything but an afternoon of sport played on green grass in bright sunshine before shirt-sleeved men, women and kids.

Although he presided over a vast chewing gum fortune in Chicago, he never quite got used to the intrusion of the 20th Century into the game he loved. Night baseball, bigtime television, the players' union, law suits, tampering with the reserve clause, agents and the resulting astronomical salary demands — these were realities he refused to face.

One of his final acts as a blow for the preservation of the status quo was that of unloading the National Leagues' two-time batting champion, Bill Madlock, saying to a friend: "How can I pay a man three times more than I make as chairman of the board of my company?"

He steadfastly stuck to his belief that baseball, as concieved by Abner Doubleday, was intended to be a daytime game for the whole family. He never allowed lights in Wrigley Field.

Wrigley was pictured as a strong but silent force by friends, associates and onetime employes who were at Shea Stadium Tuesday for the season opening of the Mets against the St. Louis Cardfnals.

"In the 30 years I knew him, we sat in many meetings together," said Charles (Chub) Feeney, president of the National League. "He was never bombastic. He never tried to force his will on anybody. He would subordinate the interest of his own club for those of baseball.

"Owners looked upon him as a stabilizing influence. They watched how he voted and then went along."

St. Louis infielder Don Kessinger, a Cub for 11 years, said Wrigley always had an ear for a player's problems. "I never dealt with him on contract matters — nobody did," he added.

"But you could pick up the phone and call him any time. He always answered personally."

This father image was confirmed by Hall of Famer Ernie Banks in Chicago, the inveterate Mr. Cub.

"Mr. Wrigley always liked for us to come in and talk," he said. "One of the last things he said to me, when I got in the Hall of Fame, was, 'Ernie, keep your feet on the ground and not your head in the sky — stay close to the people.'"

Stanley Cup teams resume play in quarterfinal round

By The Associated Press

For openers, the teams that scored first scored often and, as a result, move into tonight's second games of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup series owning 1-0 leads.

"Holy mackerel," said Brad Park Monday night after the Boston Bruins crushed Los Angeles 8-3. "All I could think of was that we were up 5-0 and here we had two periods to go."

"It's tough for a team to get back after we scored so quickly," said Guy Lafleur, who scored three goals and had three assists in leading the Montreal Canadiens' 7-2 rout of the St. Louis Blues.

"We got the jump on them and then we went into our defensive shell," said Toronto Coach Red Kelly after the Maple Leafs scored three goals before the middle of the first period en route to a 3-2 decision over the Philadelphia Flyers. "Philadelphia never really seemed to get untracked. I think that week off hurt them."

And it was the same story in Uniondale, N.Y., where the New York Islanders built a 2-0 lead after 20 minutes of play, then kept things even the rest of the way for a 4-2 triumph over the Buffalo Sabres.

The victories for New York, Boston and Montreal occurred on their home ice, giving them the opportunity to take 2-0 leads in home games tonight in the best-of-seven quarter-final series. That leaves Philadelphia the odd team out after losing in the normally friendly Spectrum.

"The pressure is on them now," said Toronto's Lanny McDonald. "We had to win one here (in Philadelphia) and we did it."

The secret to Toronto's success was its policy of containment.

"It's really quite simple," said Leafs defenseman Ian Turnbull. "They try and blow you out of the building with their forechecking by dumping the puck quickly to center ice.

Clam shells used for roads over marshes

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) - With the help of two Turkish-born engineers, Louisiana has developed a method of building "floating" highways over marsh as soft as ice cream.

The main ingredient is a lot of clam shells. And Louisiana has a lot of clam shells.

"In 1971 we were just getting involved with relocation of U.S. 90 and needed to come up with a cheap method to cross a marsh," said Ali Kemahli, soil design engineer for the State Highway Department.

His division linked up with a Louisiana State University engineering team to research the idea of using clam shells for a highway embankment.

The university team was headed by Ara Arman, a civil engineering instructor who, like Kemahli, moved to the United States from Istanbul years ago.

They attended the same university in Istanbul, though at different times. And both attended the University of Texas, again at different times.

"It really wasn't a new idea," said Kemahli. "Oil companies had been building small work roads with clam shells for years. But no one had tried to build a major highway on such an embankment. Now we've got Alabama doing it."

The final decision to try the new method was made when the department was faced with building a 4.4-mile section of U.S. 90 near Raceland in the heart of the state's marsh country. The road will be completed in two years.

The questionable stretch near Raceland is so soft a demonstration film shows a man easily pushing a 12-foot pole into the marsh with one arm.

To use the traditional embankment of sand, the department would have had to dredge up tons of marsh mud and use an enormous amount of sand fill. After all that, there would be no guarantee the sand wouldn't just disappear into the marsh.

Even if enough sand could be poured, the cost of construction of the tiny stretch of road would be about $26 million. And an elevated highway would have cost about $30 million.

No dredging is required for a shell embankment. It's just a matter of dumping the shells into the marsh. Tthe total cost of the 4.4 miles will be roughly $10 million.

Construction crews are building a five-foot-high shell embankment, allowing for about two feet of settling.

"The shell is lighter than soil or sand and virtually floats like a raft on the muck after just a little settling," one of Kemahli's engineers noted.

The team built a demonstration road first and then double-checked in the lab.

A ton of sand is cheaper than a ton of shell but it doesn't take as much shell to build an embankment. And since there is no sand near the marsh, transportation costs also become a factor in the final cost.

"What the shell does is give us an alternative to sand and make the contracts more competitive," Kemahli said.

The present U.S. 90 coast road was built along natural ridges in the marsh and therefore is full of curves and dangerous, engineers said.

Penney opening circa 1939

The J. C. Penney Company is celebrating its 75th anniversary this year. The Sikeston store opened in May of 1939 with officials from five states on hand for the grand opening. This picture appeared in the Sikeston Standard on May 25, 1939. From left, are C. E. Kerby of St. Louis, district supervisor; Maj. C. L. Malone, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Roy Johnson, manager of Wellston Penney Store; Col. C. L. Blanton Sr., publisher of the Standard; G. W. H. Presnell, mayor; P. E. Brown, manager of Sikeston Penney Store; Ralph Potashnick, president of Lions Club; C. C. Scott, secretary of Chamber of Commerce; Tom Legan, president of Junior Chamber of Commerce; Pleas Malcolm, postmaster and C. H. Denman of the Herald.

J.C. Penney buyer seeks quality, fashion, price

This year Dick Swiney of New York City will buy about 48 million pairs of socks. He'll pick out 9 million pairs of dress socks, 12 million pairs of work socks, almost 10 million pairs of athletic socks, and the rest in fahsion colors – even a few thousand pairs of argyles.

Dick Swiney is not your above - average sock freak – he's the men's hosiery buyer for nearly 1700 JCPenny department stores and is representative of about 300 buying experts at the company who ordered more than $8 billion worth of merchandise for home and family last year.

Swiney's job could sound quite simple: buy socks from the manufactureres, ship them to JCPenney stores, then sit back and hope someone buys them.

"I wish it were that easy," Swiney says, "but even buying something as basic as plain black socks requires the efforts of hundreds of people to make sure we offer our customer what she wants, when she wants it, and at a price she thinks is fair."

Swiney and most other JCPenney buyers refer to the customer as "she" because women do most of the department store shopping. "One survey we've seen says women buy up to 80 per cent of the men's underwear and hosiery in our stores," Swiney observes. "Thus, I've got to be sure our merchandise appeals to the person buying it as well as the one who will wear it."

One of those appeals is quality. Swiney and his counterparts utilize customer preference surveys, industry data, a product design department and corporate testing laboratories to set specifications for manufacture of JCPenney-bra nd products.

Manufacturing plants are visited to make sure proper equipment and techniques are used to produce goods at a proper quality level. JCPenney quality assurance inspectors spot - check shipments at the plant to see that specifications are met.

"Even a simple sock has many quality variables to be monitored," says Swiney. "I have to ask many things to decide what we offer our customers' Will dyes run or fade in repeated washings? How tightly should yarns be knitted to give warmth, ventilation and elasticity? How much elastic is needed to make the socks stay up without binding?

"Most importantly, I have to ask – will the customer consider this product a good value for the price? Once all this is figured out and confirmed, we sign a contract for production," he says.

Fashion is another consideration. Buyers must be alert to emerging trends and act quickly so customers can find the right looks when fashion is utmost in mind. Apparel buyers are 'in the marketplace' almost constantly, deciding what will be big in coming seasons. Regular communication between stores and buyers helps determine if a fashion trend is local, regional or national so the buyer can decide how much to order. Fashion is important in all types of merchandise today, whether it's apparel, home furnishings or even automotive goods.

"We rely on store managers and staffs a grteat deal for fashion information. The stores are closes t to the customers and can tell us what will sell best in their particular area," Swiney says. Stores get leads by observing what community trendsetters are wearing, what other stores begin to offer, and by talking with customers to see what they want.

Merchandise buyers add somehing else to the formula that leads to a final buying decision – experience. Swiney's experience dates bak to 1958 when he joined JCPenney after graduation from Fordham University and duty as a Marine Corp officer. He spent several years as a buyer's assistant for ties, belts and shirts before being named buyer of men's knitted shirts. he assumed his present responsibility as hosiery buyer early in 1976.

"When I started, you got your experience in the buyer's sample rooms sorting new merchandise and learning everthing you could from the buyer who supervised you," he says. "Today our buyer trainees spend 18 months in a program of formal instruction and closely-monitored on- the- job training to attain their initial level of expertise."

Other considerations the buyers cope with are packaging, marketing and advertising.

Close scrutiny

New Madrid ARC to elect new officers

NEW MADRID — The New Madrid County Association for Retarded Citizens will sponsor Vicki Fletcher from Lilbourn to attend Mo-Val summer camp in June. The Mo-Val summer camp is sponsored by the United Church of Christ and is designed for older adolescents and young adults who are mentally handicapped.

The Association for Retarded Citizens, whose goal is to aid the welfare of all New Madrid retarded citizens, will meet Thursday, at 7 p.m. at the Title One office of the Howardville Vocation Building. Officers for the next year will be elected at this meeting and all persons concerned with helping the handicapped persons of New Madrid County are encouraged to attend.

The Prayer

"We glory in tribulation also: knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope." (Romans 5:3-4)

PRAYER: Father, we thank You for the trials and persecutions that You allow to enter our lives. We know this is Your way of preventing us from becoming too content and lazy in our spiritual walk. We pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS By Bil Keane

"I beat Billy gettin' dressed!"

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, April 13, the 103rd day of 1977. There are 262 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1743, the third American president and author of the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson, was born in Albemarle County, Virginia.

On this date:

In 1366, King Richard II of England was born.

In 1598, King Henry IV of France signed the Edict of Nantes, granting a large measure of religious liberty to the Protestant Huguenots.

In 1776, Gen. George Washington arrived in New York to prepare the city's defense in the Revolutionary War.

In 1848, the island of Sicily was declared independent of Naples.

In 1943, President Franklin Roosevelt dedicated the Jefferson Memorial in Washington.

In 1964, Sidney Poitier became the first black to win a Hollywood Oscar as "best actor."

Ten years ago: President Lyndon Johnson pledged U. S. support for the European common market.

Five years ago: President Richard Nixon flew to Canada for a three-day visit.

One year ago: A munitions plant explosion in Finland left 45 dead and 70 injured.

Today's birthdays: Former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen is 70 years old. Irish writer Samuel Beckett is 71.

Thought for today: In the truest sense, freedom cannot be bestowed, it must be achieved — President Franklin Roosevelt.

Teasdale 3 months late with new appointments

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A three-month delay by Gov. Joseph Teasdale in appointing persons to fill two expired terms on the Missouri Elections Commission has shrouded commission operations in legal uncertainty.

Commission Chairman Ed Bohl says the panel's work is not being hampered although no successors have been named for Commissioners Sam Murphy of Kirkwood and David Blanton of Sikeston whose terms expired Dec. 31.

But Bohl said if an issue before the commission, which administers and enforces the state's Campaign Finance and Disclosure Law of 1974, was decided on a close vote, "I'm not sure about the legality and what we would do."

Brendan Ryan, a top Teasdale aide, said Tuesday the governor has not made a decision on the commission appointments, and he could not say when a decision was expected. The appointments would have to be confirmed by the Senate before the appointees could take office.

The law which established the commission states that "no vacancy in commission membership shall remain unfilled for longer than 60 days."

But another section of the same law says that commissioners whose terms have expired continue to serve "until their successors are appointed and qualified."

Bohl said the governor has not contacted him about the vacancies but "he knows about them and I'm sure he will fill them in time."

The chairman added, however, that if Teasdale would name successors for Murphy and Blanton, "it would take some of the uncertainty out of it if we had a full commission."

Meanwhile, the lame duck commissioners continue to attend board meetings and serve as they always have.

"We just need a majority of four to transact business," Bohl said, "and we schedule meetings so that all four commissioners can be present."

Bohl said the commission receives "input from the other two commissioners just as we always have."

Most of the commission's work that requires a vote, Bohl said, has not been controversial and the commission has voted the same way. The commission could have a problem, Bohl said, if a controversial issue comes up and the vote is divided. "We would have to check into that," he said.

The commission has not been able to prosecute violations of the law because its validity is being appealed before the state Supreme Court. Cole County Circuit Court Judge Byron Kinder ruled the campaign law unconstitutional last fall.

Under the current law, the high court submits a list of nominees for the commission to the governor. He can appoint anyone on that list with the consent of the Senate.

But a bill currently being considered in the House would change that process if it is enacted into law. Under a proposal to revise state election laws, the high court would no longer nominate commission members. The governor would have sole appointment power. Appointees would still need Senate approval.

East Prairie investigates 3 break-ins

EAST PRAIRIE— Three break-ins believed to have occurred between Sunday and Monday night, are under investigation by the Mississippi County Sheriff's department.

Deputy Dennis Turley said today Lewis and Watson Used Furniture on Martin Street was broken into by prying open a rear door.

Only small items were reported missing, but the interior of the store was heavily vandalized.

A break-in at the home of Mrs. Orene Denton, 307 William St., was investigated Tuesday. Turley said a number of small items were taken and the method of entry was not determined.

Small items were also taken during a break-in at the home of Mrs. Claude Moxley, 408 William St., where the front door was pried open. The homes were not vandalized.

Turley said suspects are under investigation.

CB stolen

The theft of a citizens band radio, valued at $185, was reported to the Sikeston Department of Public Safety Tuesday.

George B. Rucker, 1511 E. Kathleen Ave., said the radio was stolen from his unlocked pickup truck while it was parked in front of the Sands Lounge, 1129 W. Malone Ave., from about 4 to 9 p.m.

SEAVER THRILLS KIDS

HUNTINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — Despite a broken nose and a partially blackened left eye, Met pitching ace Tom Seaver thrilled 1,500 youngsters and parents by taking the microphone for 30 minutes during "Tom Seaver Night" here. Seaver selected Nicky Varisco, 11, a Kiwanis Little Leaguer, as the winner of the main prize, an Evinrude 2-hp outboard motor.

Seaver told how thrilled he was to start out as a left fielder in Little League ball in Fresno, Calif., at the age of nine. He also introduced teammate Lee Mazzilli, Yankee Chris Chambliss, new Boston Red Sox coach Eddie Yost, ex-Yankee southpaw Eddie Lopat and Tommy Holmes, former manager of the Boston Braves. Seaver received his broken nose playing squash tennis near his home in Greenwich, Conn. He ran into his opponent's elbow.

Rowe elected mayor by East Prairie council

CHARLESTON— Councilmen Terry Rowe and Duane Eastman were elected mayor and mayor pro tem, respectively, and the oath of office was administered at Tuesay night's meeting of the City Council by City Clerk Velna Brown to Jackie Whiteside and Donald Sams, who were elected April 5.

Ava Nell Smith, representing residents on N.Main Road and in Plainview Addition, asked the council to consider establishing a "kiddie park" in the area. She cited the number of children in the addition, pointed out that there were no parks in the immediate area and the danger of traffic when children walked along North Main Road to other area parks.

It was also pointed out that some families bought property in the addition with the impression that a park would be established.

The council agreed with the need for the park and asked that a committee of residents meet with the park board to make recommendations for presentation at the next meeting.

In a related matter, Don Daughtee, president of the park board,and five board members, discussed at length with the council problems of finance, including paying park director a sufficient salary to retain his services to oversee the 62-acres of parks in the city. The latest park director resigned recently to accept employment at a higher pay.

Daughetee said the only way to run the park system adequately is to have a funded board. The council said funding a park board would require a majority vote of the public to establish a 40-cent per $100 assessed valuation tax levy.

At present, 20 cents of the city's tax levy is earmarked for parks, the maximum that can be levied without a vote of the people. This brings in about $14,000 to $15,000 each year for park maintenance and does not include all the services provided by the city for parks.

It was the council's belief that the present system offers as much as would be brought in with the 40-cent tax levy when the extra services, such as mowing, equipment and manpower, are considered.

Daughhetee was asked to contact other area towns about their park system and buget for a report at the next council meeting.

A request from City Manager Willis Downs that a surplus of $4,594.17 in the industrial park fund be transferred to the regular park fund was aproved.

An ordinance amending the city's rural fire contract ordinance was adopted. The amendment raises the cost for out-of-town fire runs from $100 to $200. Rural residents pay a $5 per year membership fee for fire protection.

Also approved was a mobile home permit fo Norbert Halter at 306 N. Fifth St.

Following a report from Councilman Whiteside, the council approved lowering the speed limit in the Plainview Addition from 20 to 15 miles per hour an the erection of new speed and "slow, children playing" signs.

The question of why the speed limit on S.Main St., which is a four-lane highway, is 35 miles per hour and the limit on E. Marshall, which is two lane, is 45 miles per hour, was raised by Whiteside. It was explained that Main Street is controlled by the state highway department and the speed limit is set by the state.

The council agreed to look into the matter to determine if the limit can be regulated by the city on St. Main Street. Members also agreed to write the State Highway Commission, requesting the left turn lane at S. Main Street and Marshall Street be marked with an arrow, rather than just a green light.

Committee appointments made by Mayor Rowe include: Finance Committee--Councilmen Woodrow Graham, Whiteside and Rowe; Liquor Committee--Sams, Whiteside and Eastman; Planning and Zoning-- Eastman, Rowe and George Story, who was re-appointed; and Land Clearance for Redevelopment--Willie Hart, who was re-appointed.

A new insurance committee was established to determine the city's insurance needs and named to the committee were Rowe, Sams, and Graham.

A brief report on the community development program was given by Tanna Parrish, director.

FCC offers CBers 6 ways to get attention

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncle Charlie, as the Federal Communications Commission is known, offers CBers six ways to get his prompt attention.

Acknowledging it does not have the manpower to police all of the abuse on citizens band radio channels, the FCC's Field Operations Bureau is putting its enforcement emphasis on what it considers the worst offenders.

"We have set up six trigger violations to which field inspectors give their priorities," says James C. McKinney, the bureau's deputy chief.

They are:

—Failing to use the radio operator's "numbers," or FCC call sign.

—Using linear amplifiers, devices that boost a CB unit's power from the legal four-watt limit to as much as 2,000 watts.

—Transmitting on frequencies other than the 40 allocated for CB use.

—Using indecent, obscene or profane language.

—Using CBnfrequencies to violate state, local or federal law, such as burglary or kidnaping.

—Working "skip," or transmitting farther than the 150 miles permitted by FCC regulations.

Penalties for all but th)jr r 1 language violations could be fines of $500 a day, although McKinney says the actual fine usually is $100.

Using indecent language is a criminal violation subject to a $10,000 fine and a year in jail.

But even with its enforcement program focusing on the "trigger" list, the FCC is unable to rid the CB airwaves of abuse, as any CBer with ears quickly hears.

McKinney acknowledges the enforcement problem and says it often is the first topic brought up at CB forums and meetings he attends. The problem, he says, is manpower.

"This bureau has approxi mately the same number of people in the field now that it had in 1948," he explains.

That totals about 400 persons, who are responsible not only for CB enforcement but for all FCC programs.

The growth of CB has put a heavy burden on the Field Operations Bureau. The FCC says it issued 678,000 licenses in February, boosting the total to nearly nine million.

The Electronic Industries Association, a trade association, estimates 22 million CBs now are in use.

To police all infractions, McKinney says, "would require a veritable army" of FCC agents.

Gene Watson gave up reshaping cars for country music career

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Gene Watson gave up reshaping cars as a body shop man to carve a successful country music career that includes four Top 10 hits in just two years.

Watson, from Houston, Tex., worked in a body shop for 12 years before deciding to devote full time to music. His gamble paid off with hits such as "Love in the Hot Afternoon," "You Could Know As Much About a Stranger," "Where Love Begins" and his current "Paper Rosie," which is near the top of the charts.

"I'd have laughed if someone had told me 10 years ago that I'd have a No. 1 hit," Watson said while sipping coffee at a Music Row record company. "I'm no Elvis, but what I have been able to do in the past years was all worth it. It makes me want to work harder."

Watson, 33, is a so-called "hard" country singer who spends 85 per cent of his time on the road with a two-piece band. Often compared to Merle Haggard, he was in Nashville to tape the snydicated "Pop Goes Country" television show.

He gave up his body shop job in Houston in 1975 after working in the shop during the day and combining that with playing at night for the better part of eight years.

"I worked at night simply because I loved the music. I was making good money since I had two jobs. But lots of mornings I was late getting to work. I put a lot of people out just so I could play at night.

"It was an extremely big decision. I knew I could get by at what I was doing, but I wasn't sure about music. But I decided to give it a try.

"It's a shaky situation to get into something you've never tried before. At that point, I hadn't been in but about four states.

"I liked working on cars and I always had. It takes more talent to do it than most people realize. But I always wanted to play music."

His tools, some $7,000 worth, remain in his garage.

"You never know what might happen," he said.

While still holding two jobs, he patterned his musical style after Haggard.

According to the F.B.I, the most probable night for a burglary is Saturday night.

Africa increasingly splintering into pro- and anti-Marxist camps

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — From the deserts of western Sahara to the eastern Horn and the central copper belt, the African continent is increasingly splintering into squabbling and often warring camps of radical Marxist-oriented states and nations ruled by anti-Communists.

The trend is currently most apparent in Zaire. President Mobutu Sese Seko claims the exiled rebels who invaded his copper-rich Shaba province from Marxist Angola are led by Cubans and armed by Soviets.

The invaders are rebels from the days when the province was known as Katanga, and some observers believe their fight is largely an internal tribal squabble. But while Mobutu has offered no public proof of Cuban or Soviet involvement, he has managed to escalate the Shaba conflict into an East-West confrontation.

Over the past week, Mobutu called in 1,500 Moroccan troops and France, a long-time backer of Mobutu's regime, is supplying him with arms and military aircraft to transport the Moroccans to Zaire.

China has condemned the invasion of Shaba as a further example of Soviet "expansionism" in Africa, and Mobutu has also rallied support from some anti-Soviet African states, including Egypt and Sudan.

Sudan, which has a 500-mile border with Zaire and a mutual defense pact with Egypt, says the invasion has a "direct effect" on its security and has pledged "whatever help Zaire needs." Egypt has reportedly sent a military team to help the Zaire army.

Both Cuba and the Soviet Union have denied any role in the invasion. Angola says the conflict is an internal uprising against the "dictatorial" Mobutu and has warned foreign countries, "African and otherwise," of the "grave consequences" of intervening in Zaire.

In many ways, the events in Zaire reflect the greater "ideological" conflict — often regional differences masked in cold war rhetoric — spreading among African states.

Angola and Zaire have been enemies ever since Mobuto moved, with covert American aid, to support "pro-Western" factions in Angola's civil war in 1975 against the Soviet-and Cuban-backed Popular Movement (MPLA) now ruling the former Portuguese colony.

Angola's civil war is still under way with over 10,000 Cuban troops backed by Soviet arms trying to put down units of the National Union (UNITA) movement led by Jonas Savimbi.

South African defense officials see the invasion of Zaire as an attempt to create a "red belt" across Africa.

This, they say, would make it possible to put diplomatic and political pressure on Zaire's southern neighbor, Zambia, which remains moderate despite its role as one of the "front-line" states facing the white-ruled outposts of the south — Rhodesia and South Africa.

Those two nations have repeatedly stressed their view that the liberation wars of southern Africa are a direct Communist bid to control the mineral-rich and strategic subcontinent.

The growing Soviet support of liberation movements fighting white rule in Rhodesia and South-West Africa (Namibia) is provoking concern also among several moderate black African leaders.

The almost triumphant tours recently by Presidents Nikolai V. Podgorny of the Soviet Union and Fidel Castro of Cuba through eastern and southern Africa have not eased that concern.

Elsewhere in Africa, a conflict similar to Zaire's has Morocco and Mauritania confronted by Soviet-armed Polasario guerrillas based in Marxist Algeria fighting for control of the sandy wastes of western Sahara. That war began after the 1975 partition of the phosphate-rich Spanish Sahara between Morocco and Mauritania.

Other black African nations reported uneasy about the steadily increasing Soviet involvement in Africa include Mauritania, Senegal, Ivory Coast, Togo and Gabon, all former French colonies, and Kenya in east Africa.

Kenya is particularly concerned by events in neighboring Ethiopia and Somalia, where radical Marxist regimes are increasingly dependent on Soviet and Cuban support. Kenya's fear is shared by Egypt and Sudan, who see possible Soviet domination of the Red Sea through pro-Moscow regimes in Somalia and Ethiopia.

Ethiopia claimed on Monday that troops from neighboring Sudan were attacking northwest Ethiopian border towns and appealed to the Organization of African Unity for help.

Sudan is supporting guerrillas fighting for the independence of Ethiopia's northernmost province of Eritrea and a former royalist group fighting the Addis Ababa government in the northwest.

Kenya is also troubled by Soviet aid to its unfriendly neighbor, Uganda, and deteriorating relations with Tanzania, its socialist neighbor to the south, which has closed its border with Kenya in an economic dispute.

Marxist-oriented Benin has charged by innuendo that pro-Western Gabon, Morocco, Ivory Coast, and Senegal were all behind an alleged invasion of the tiny West African country earlier this year. Relations between Benin and its moderate neighbor, Togo, have sharply deteriorated in recent months.

A cold war in West Africa has also been under way for years between Marxist Guinea, a virtual Soviet satellite, and Senegal and Ivory Coast. President Sekou Toure of Guinea — through the official Radio Conakry, self-styled "Voice of the Revolution" — has repeatedly claimed Senegal and Ivory Coast are plotting his Marxist regime's overthrow.

The Panama hat was popularized by Theodore Roosevelt on his visits to his pet construction project — the Panama Canal. Panama hats are made, not in Panama, but in Ecuador of fine jipijapa straw.

What's the law?

The case of the unwanted smoker

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Betty was a telephone operator who constantly wore a halo around her head -- but it wasn't due to her saintliness. It was because her fellow employes smoked so much that a continual ring of smoke circled her head.

Consumed by the bellows of smoke, a desperate Betty finally started a court action to ban smoking anywhere near her.

"It's as if my entire work area is just one big humidor," she complained to a judge, "and I can't take it any more. I can't breathe and I cough all day. Certainly, the cigarettes of others shouldn't be my coffin nails."

"While we're sympathetic to Betty's complaint," responded her employer, "the business of a telephone company is communications, and not the personal habits of its employees. Since it's a free country, if our employees have to smoke, we can't stop them, nor can we be required to stop them."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you rescue Betty from her humidor by banning cigarette smoking in her area?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! Noting the toxic nature of cigarette smoking as reported by the surgeon general; the legislative requirement that warnings be placed on cigarette packages as to the harmful effect of cigarette smoking; the well-known relationship of cigarette smoke with emphysema, lung cancer and heart disease, and scientific evidence that involuntary or passive smoking can be injurious to a substantial number of workers, the judge ruled that an employe's common-law right to a safe working environment includes not having to breathe the "second hand" cigarette smoke of fellow employees. Thus, concluded the judge, smoking at the telephone company had to be restricted to the company's lunchroom and forbidden in all work areas.

(Based upon a 1976 New Jersey Superior Court, Chancery Div., Decision)

During the Napoleonic Wars, the French governor of the Seychelles Islands hit upon a unique solution to the problems of war. Each time a British ship appeared, he surrendered. When it left, he ran up the French flag again. After the war, Britain gained control of the colony, but the governor stayed on, changing his name from the French De Quinssy to the anglicized De Quincy.

But he will do his best

New mayor didn't want the job

By FRANK WATSON

BLOOMFIELD — M. E. "Bud" Bresee was a reluctant candidate for the position of mayor. Really, you might say he wasn't a candidate at all.

He was elected to the position April 5 by a write-in campaign which just barely had his approval.

Several days before the election a group of local businessmen approached him and asked him to file, Bresee recalls. "But I didn't. I have enough to do here," he said, gesturing to his office at the Farm Bureau agency in Bloomfield, where he has been manager for 14 years.

Of the group that asked him to run, he said, "When they left they said they would have a write-in campaign, to write in my name. I told them to go ahead, not thinking they would."

Just a few days before the election Bresee saw a full-page advertisement in the weekly paper urging voters to write in his name.

"I knew they were serious when I saw the ad in the paper," he said. "I thought maybe they were half- serious, but never dreamed that."

The ad, which was not signed, was placed by a group of 10-15 city businessmen, he said, and it was a surprise to him.

That ad was also the determining factor in former Mayor Glen Ayers' decision to withdraw from the race, but with hurt feelings. Some thought Ayers would be re-elected in spite of his withdrawal, but in the final count he lost to Bresee by a vote of 159-105 -- a 54-vote difference.

Bresee was careful to not criticize the way the city business has been handled, but at the same time did not praise the work which had been done.

He said he would look into possible reorganization of the city bureaucracy and indicated that it could be run on a businesslike basis.

At the same time he declined to say whether he thought it was now being handled efficiently.

He said it wouldn't bother him at all to fire a 20-year employe if he was not doing his job, but that he did not anticipate any city employes would be leaving.

Concerning gossip, which seems to travel like wildfire, and occasionally causes misunderstanding, he said, "I don't spend a lot of time on idle gossip."

Of the police department, he said, "As far as I'm concerned the entire town can get by without a police force."

He said he has definite plans to look into the possibility of creating a place for teen-agers, and possibly older persons, to gather and enjoy themselves.

"We have nothing in this town for teen-agers — a community center," he said, indicating he has no idea what kind of obstacles he might run into trying to implement the plan.

While he was reluctant at first to accept the mayor's position, he told the fellow businessmen supporters that since they went so far in their efforts, he would take the job.

"I have no doubt I could do the job if I had the time, and I'm going to take the time," he said.

He admits that at 50-years old he is a novice in politics, but feels his business experience will see him through.

"I have plenty of experience managing money, people, myself," he said. "The Farm Bureau is an organization sort of like the city." And before he got into insurance 14 years ago, he was a plant superintendent for two different companies.

Maybe it's logical after 14 years in the business, but many times in the interview last week he referred to the insurance business, searching it for comparisons.

He was cautious in his answers, often answering with a question, speaking in a soft voice. Perhaps he summed up his attitude in his answer to the question, "Do you think you'll get along with the press?"

"I know what they can do to you," he said.

In spite of his support, he said he is committed only to himself and to run the city to the best of his ability, since he was not a declared candidate and did not want the job.

Ayers, before he withdrew, criticized the fact that Bresee was running without first filing.

"I supposed I should have filed, but I didn't want the job, so why should I have filed?" he asked.

Questions concerning Ayers' cirticism of the fact that nobody was interested enough in the city to file for office, Bresee turned away.

Perhaps his 14 years in in insurance has taught him how to handle people. About halfway through the interview in his Bloomfield office, he received a telephone call.

"As your new mayor you're going to ask me to do you a favor already?" he chukled. "News travels fast. Who am I speaking to?"

It turned out that the city, sometime in the past, bought a hearse to use as an ambulance, and the fellow on the other end of the line wanted to buy it, if the city wanted to sell.

"I doubt if politics will get in my blood, not at my age," he said.

As if to illustrate his point, when all the votes were counted election night and he learned he had won, he said, "My son was more happy than I was. To me it meant I would have to devote more time and effort to something different."

New mayor discusses plans

M. E. "Bud" Bresee, elected mayor of Bloomfield by a write-in vote April 5, pauses to discuss his plans for the city. He says since he was elected by write-in, without campaigning, he owes no debt and can run the city impartially.

Governor not ready to announce curator

According to broadcast news reports, two Sikeston attorneys are being considered for posts on the University of Missouri Board of Curators.

One of the attorneys, Manuel Drumm, 4 Cotton Terrace told The Daily Standard this morning that although he has had several calls about the rumor, he knows nothing about it. The other attorney, Robert A. Dempster, 226 N. Kingshighway, was unavailable for comment Tuesday and this morning.

According to a spokesman in Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale's press secretary's office, the rumor about the two Sikeston men could neither be confirmed nor denied, and no one had any idea when appointments for the curators' posts would be announced.

The board of curators is the governinf body of the University of Missouri and is composed of nine members, appointed by the governor and confirmed by the state senate.

3 injured in SeMo accidents

Three persons received minor injuries in separate traffic accidents on area roads Tuesday and early today, the highway patrol reported.

An Iron County man was injured at 10:15 a.m. Tuesday when his westbound car ran off the road on Route V two miles east of Pilot Knob and overturned.

Gary M. Ingram, 30, of Pilot Knob, who refused medical treatment, was arrested for driving while intoxicated and driving while license revoked, the patrol announced.

An Illinois woman received minor injuriesin a two-vehicle accident at 10:50 a.m. Tuesday one mile east of Miner on Highway 62 in Scott County.

The accident occurred when a westbound car driven by Lawrence E. Marks, 31, of Mounds, Ill., stopped to turn onto a side road and was struck from behind by another westbound car, driven by Robert Noel Light, 35, of Sikeston, which skidded into the rear of the Marks car.

A passenger in the Marks car, Kathleen Marks, 48, wife of the driver, received injuries and was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

An Arkansas truck driver received minor injuries at 2:50 a.m. today when he lost control of his northbound tractor-trailer truck upon applying the brakes while being passed by another truck. His truck then ran off the road and jacknifed. The accident occurred 16 miles south of Fredericktown on Highway 67. The driver, Ronald David Montgomery Sr., 29, of Mabelvale, Ark., received injuries and was taken to Madison County Memorial Hospital in Fredericktown.

Earth tremor is felt in Sikeston sixty years ago

60 years ago
April 13, 1917

An earthquake was felt in Sikeston Monday afternoon, resembling a distinct shock more than a continued trembling of the earth's surface. The limits of the area affected seem to be confined to a strip on each side of the Mississippi River extending approximately from the northen to the southern boundary lines of Missouri or those lines extending eastward.

Public School notes. Misses Lillian and Louise Bergman spent Easter in Cape Girardeau.

The graduation exercises for the public schools of Scott County will be held at Benton on Saturday, April 21st.

On Friday afternoon before Easter, the pupils of the Fairview school, just south of Sikeston, were given an Easter hunt by their teacher, Miss Vernetta Murchison. Ben Sells, jr., received a bunny rabbit as prize for finding the largest number, 15 eggs. Rudell Daniel came in second with 12 eggs; and the booby prize went to little Kathleen Caldwell, who hunted but found none.

Sikeston is not to be behind other towns and cities in her show of patriotism, and is now providing funds for the erection of a fine steel flag pole and flag. It will be placed in Railroad Park and will have a good big and deep block of concrete as a base.

Haley gets citation for 'Roots'

NEW YORK (AP) — Author Alex Haley has been given a National Book Awards special citation for "Roots," which traces his ancestry from slavery in the United States back to the African village of his forefathers.

The judges excluded "Roots" from the history category, but said "its distinguished literary quality justifies according it a special citation of merit."

The history prize was won by Irving Howe for "World of Our Fathers," a study of the immigration and Americanization of European Jews from the 1880s to the 1920s.

The winner in the fiction category was Wallace Stegner's "The Spectator Bird," which deals with the final years of an aging, arthritic literary agent who retires with his wife to California.

The awards, with a cash prize of $1,000 except for Haley's citation, were announced Monday by the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters. All books published in the United States in 1976 by American authors were eligible for the awards.

Child psychologist Bruno Bettelheim won the contemporary thought award for "The Uses of Enchantment: The Meaning and Importance of Fairy Tales."

The award for children's literature went to Katherine Paterson for "The Master Puppeteer," set in 18th century Japan.

The judges rated W.A. Swanberg's "Norman Thomas: The Last Idealist" as the best entry in the biography and autobiography category.

The poetry award went to Richard Eberhart, poet in residence and professor of English at Dartmouth, for "Collected Poems 1930-1976."

Li-li Ch'en won the translation prize for her English version of "Master Tung's Western Chamber Romance: A Chinese Chantefable."

Deadline for media ownership split extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has until April 22 to put into effect court-ordered rules to break up joint single-city ownerships of newspapers and broadcast stations.

The U.S. Court of Appeals granted the FCC additional time last week after the agency said the new rules should not be put into effect until the Supreme Court has time to review the case.

The court's decision, issued March 1, overturned an FCC rule that allows 79 firms to own newspapers and television stations in the same community. The ruling affected an unknown number of joint onwerships of newspapers and radio stations.

At the time of the ruling, the FCC was not issuing new licenses for broadcast stations under newspaper ownership and was breaking up existing combinations when the sole broadcast outlet in an area was owned by the only newspaper publishing there.

Auto firm agrees to 3-day pact

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Atty. Gen. John Ashcroft announced today that his office has obtained a voluntary compliance agreement from Merollis Chevrolet, Inc., in St. Louis to insure public protection from possibly misleading sales practices.

The agreement requires the automobile dealer to provide a three-day cooling-off period for customers if the terms of their purchase contract have been changed from the original buyer's order.

The provision, Ashcroft said, resulted after consumers complained that the over-all price of the car ordered from the dealership had increased between the time they signed the buyer's order and the time they signed the purchase contract.

The signed agreement specifically states that Merollis Chevrolet does not admit violating any state laws.

"This agreement is to provide necessary protection to the buyer during a major purchase," Ashcroft said. "This type of relief is unique in that it allows the customer to cancel his car purchase without penalty if there have been changes in the terms."

The notice further provides that a written notice must be given to customers regarding the three-day cooling off period. If a customer does cancel the agreement, his money deposit and trade-in car (or title) must be returned.

Merollis Chevrolet also agreed to distinguish between factory and non-factory dealer installed optional equipment; list any free goods or rebates on the retail order form; furnish information on the retail order form regarding the availability of such optional items as insurance and extended warranty coverage.

If the voluntary compliance agreement is violated, Ashcroft said, Merollis Chevrolet may be liable for up to a $5,000 fine for each violation.

Half of state's farms need rain above normal

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Above normal rainfall is needed by about half of Missouri's farms this spring, but the atmospheric science division at the University of Missouri says the odds are against it.

Gerald Barger, a research associate at the university, said the chance of getting at least normal rainfall is no better than 45 per cent, while the probability of getting 2 inches above normal is 35 to 40 per cent.

"Most parts of Missouri northwest of a line between the northeast corner of the state and curving through Jefferson City and Joplin can benefit from above normal spring rainfall," Wayne Decker, chairman of the atmospheric science division, said.

Decker and Barger said east-central Missouri, the Ozarks and the Bootheel have received adequate rain to replenish water reserves but there is a shortage of subsoil moisture elsewhere in the state. The northwest corner of the state appears the hardest hit, they said.

William Murphy, an extension agronomist at the university, said subsoil moisture is absolutely necessary for good crop growth, and many farmers could be in considerable difficulty if there aren't good spring and summer rains.

Murphy said moisture levels can vary on the same farm, and he urged farmers to make soil borings just before planting to determine subsoil moisture.

"If a northwest Missouri farmer gets well above normal April precipitation and can find moist soil down to four feet, he can plant as usual," Murphy said. "If not, farmers with soybeans should plant varieties with different maturities--insurance of getting some crop. Those who had been considering corn should consider sorghum instead, providing they have facilities to dry and handle the sorhum."

JEFFERSON CITY — A model program to improve health care services in 20 central Missouri counties should start operations sometime this summer.

"We would like to have two social workers out in the field by June 1," says Barbara Hill, executive director of the new Social Services Systems (SSSI) program, "but at this point that might be a little unrealistic."

Ms. Hill has just begun unpacking her own boxes in the agency's Jefferson City office. But the secretary and five social workers that will make up her staff have not yet been hired.

The program's purpose, according to Mary Lee, president of the SSSI Board of Directors, is to provide health care services in rural areas where such services are now deficient or non-existent.

The model program will serve a 20-county area surrounding Jefferson City, with Howard and Audrain the northernmost counties served and Laclede and Dent the southernmost.

Lee hopes that eventually the central Missouri program can be expanded to serve the entire outstate area. The urban areas of St. Louis and Kansas City, she says, are already adequately served by health care social workers.

The way that the program would work is that area hospitals would refer patients in need of counseling or advice to the SSSI agency. The social worker would then inform the patient of available services and help him or her understand the various federal and state programs and how to make best use of them.

Although most of the patients served by the program will be elderly citizens, cases involving unwed mothers, child abuse and emotional problems will also make up the caseload of the health services social worker.

The SSSI program grew out of work done by the Missouri Association for Social Welfare (MASW), a non-profit organization based in Jefferson City that monitors social welfare issues.

A $25,000 grant was awarded to SSSI for the central Missouri program through the Missouri Office of Aging, a primarily federally funded state agency.

The central Missouri operation, however, is expected to cost upwards of $100,000, with most of the costs expected to be raised through reimbursements from hospitals for services rendered. Board president Lee expects the program to be self-sustaining after a year's operation.

Lee says the central Missouri area was chosen partly because it would be the easiest area to expand from.

SALT-FREE BREAD TOPS WITH DIETERS

More and more people are being advised by their doctors to restrict the amount of sodium in their diets. This is often due to hypertension, a leading cause of heart disease and strokes. The necessary taste transition can be difficult since we grow accustomed to salting our food at an early age.

Unfortunately there is more to a low-sodium diet than eliminating table salt from our diets. There are numerous other sodium compounds that are found in prepared foods. Baking soda, baking powder, monosodium glutamate and sodium benzoate, a preservative, are just a few.

For example, did you know that commercial breads contain about 125 mg of sodium per slice? Since dieters may be restricted to 500 or 1000 mg per day, this figure is rather significant.

The solution is making your own bread, and it is a lot easier than it sounds. This recipe for Salt-Free Whole Wheat Bread is simple to follow and requires just two relatively short risings. Salt is a yeast inhibitor, so this bread rises faster than most. Fleischmann's Unsalted Margarine, found in your grocer's freezer, adds rich flavor to these fragrant loaves. The scrumptious aroma that fills your kitchen upon baking is just part of your reward. Each delicious slice contains only 1 mg of sodium!

For more information on low-sodium diets and over 50 recipes, send for a free color booklet courtesy of Fleischmann's Margarine. Just write to: "Delicious Low-Sodium Diets," P.O. Box 2695, Grand Central Station, N.Y., N.Y. 10017.

SALT-FREE WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

Makes 2 loaves

4 to 5 cups unsifted flour
2 cups unsifted whole wheat flour
1/3 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 package active dry yeast
1-1/2 cups water
3/4 cup milk
1/3 cup Fleischmann's Unsalted Margarine

Combine flours. Mix 2 cups flour mixture, brown sugar, granulated sugar and undissolved yeast.

Heat water, milk and margarine until liquids are very warm (120°F-130°F.). Add to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed. Add 1/2 cup flour mixture. Beat at high speed 2 minutes. Stir in enough flour mixture to make a stiff dough. Turn out onto floured board; knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turn to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, until doubled, about 50 minutes.

Punch dough down; turn out onto floured board. Divide dough in half. Shape into loaves. Place in greased 9x5x3-inch pans. Cover; let rise until doubled, about 1 hour.

Bake on lowest rack position at 400°F. about 30 minutes or until done.

Drought package reopens loans to qualified farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A package of drought aid to help distressed farmers, including emergency loans to cover crop losses, was announced by Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

The emergency loans are available to qualified farmers and ranchers, including fish farmers, in all counties designated for emergency drought relief. The loans are being handled by the department's Farmers Home Administration (FmHa).

Bergland also announced that new applications for federal crop insurance are being taken again on 1977 crops, including corn and soybeans, in eight states.

The insurance applications were shut off earlier, some of them last fall, when it appeared that severe drought might cause a disruptive rush of farmers into the insurance program.

"Recent precipitation in these areas has relieved the drought situation to the extent that federal crop insurance can now be offeredto farmers who are not already insured, Bergland said.

Bergland said that all counties closed to new insurance applications have been reopened in Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin. In addition, most of the counties closed in Kansas have been reopened.

"This reopening affects corn, grain sorghum, soybeans, tobacco and sunflowers," Bergland said in a statement. "We reopened small grains (including spring wheat), sugar beets, flax and peas in most of these states on April 4."

A spokesman said that regional offices of the USDA's Federal Crop Insurance Corp. have the county list and further details.

The drought emergency loan program is part of a relief package ordered recently by President Carter who also asked Congress to authorize emergency assistance to provide more conservation action in water-short areas.

Bergland said the loans will apply nationwide in all counties designated as drought emergency areas.

But as with all FmHA emergency loans, farmers must be able to show that they lack other sources of credit needed for recovery from natural disaster. Eligible farmers can get emergency drought loans if losses are 20 per cent or more of normal production and result from:

—Inability to plant all or a portion of normal crops, including feed crops, or inability to graze livestock on pasture affected by drought.

—Inability to produce all or a protion of normal perennial crops already growing, such as fruits and nuts, because of drought.

—Inability to harvest all or part of crops that have been planted, resulting from drought.

Officials said that loans also can be made to cover the loss of physical property such as irrigation wells. All loans will bear an annual interest rate of 5 per cent.

A spokesman said farmers pay back the loans usually "on their ability to pay" from proceeds of future output. Although repayment times vary, farmers can have up to seven years to repay the loans.

Officials said the drought emergency loans will be made through local county offices of FmHA in drought designated counties. Offices usually are located in county seats and are listed in the U.S. government section of telephone directories.

Bergland said that the disaster loan program has been changed from previous regulations that prevented the agency from making a loan against drought loss until the end of the crop season.

Now, if a farmer cannot plant a crop because of drought the loss can be calculated immediately, he said.

80 YEARS OF BEST SELLERS: 1895-1975. By Alice P. Hackett & James H. Burke. Bowker. 265 Pages. $14.95.

Think back, try to remember. 1941. A time when on "one Sunday afternoon toward the end of the year, when most American families had their radios tuned to the Philharmonic, came the stunning announcement that the Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor."

It wouldn't take much, if any, prodding for most Americans to remember Dec. 7, 1941, but it probably would take a bit of doing to get them to recall the titles of some of the best-selling books in the country that year. For those who just can't remember, the top fiction best-seller was A.J. Cronin's "The Keys Of The Kingdom." Leading the nonfiction list was "Berlin Diary," by William L. Shirer.

In this most informative volume, which is a history of sorts as seen from the best-seller lists, the authors have covered the years from 1895 through 1975 by listing the 10 top-selling books of each year and following this with a terse but fact-filled summation of what happened to highlight that year. A unique, but most interesting, way of presenting a bit of minor social history to the reader.

The book starts with the year 1895 because, obviously, that was "the year in which the first American best seller lists were published." The leader of the fiction list was Ian Maclaren's "Beside The Bonnie Brier Bush." What led the nonfiction list isn't told, since that list wasn't started until 1912.

In addition to the year-by-year breakdowns with the accompanying historical sketches, this book also offers a plethora of other book lists, each with appropriate comment by the authors. For example, those interested in finding out what book tops the "crime and suspense" list will discover that Mario Puzo's "The Godfather" leads the pack with 12,140,000 copies, but right behind and occupying the next seven places are novels by Mickey Spillane.

There is plenty of material here to absorb both those who like to play the numbers game and those interested in finding out what Americans were reading over the past 80 years. Either approach, or a combination of both, is rewarding.

CHILDREN OF DUNE. By Frank Herbert. Putnam. 444 Pages. $8.95.

This concluding volume of Frank Herbert's "Dune" trilogy, though categorized as science fiction, more closely resembles a three-part mystery: 1) Why was this book written? 2) Why was it published? and 3) Why bother to read it?

The setting in some future age is a desert planet aptly named Dune. The heroes of the plot are a set of 9-year-old twins, the children of their People's mysteriously vanished Messiah. They are endowed with wisdom beyond their years and possess the memories of all their ancestors. Both these gifts prove handy as the children try to rule in their father's absence while facing an onslaught of adversities, including threatening foreigners and a skeleton in the family closet.

This is a tedious novel that abounds with starch-stiff characters. They have awkward names, such as Muad'Dib, Tyekanik, and Stilgar — 'Stil" to his friends — and they use ridiculous words that sound like anagrams. Even less tolerable is the dialogue, which is rivaled in banality only by that found in low-budgeted movies. It all adds up to a pretty unpalatable space-age soap opera.

Miner has reason to rejoice

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Nearly two weeks ago, David Lynn Jackson closed his eyes to shut out the terror. When he opened them 18 hours later he had reason to rejoice.

Jackson, 19, lost both arms in a desperate attempt to save a fellow miner as a sheet of steel plummeted 1,000 feet in a mine shaft toward them.

He was rushed to Jewish Hospital here where a team of surgeons successfully reimplanted his arms in a delicate 12-hour operation April 1. Doctors say Jackson should regain 60 per cent use of his right arm and up to 40 per cent use of his left.

Jackson, of Bloomington Springs, Tenn., said at a news conference Monday that he and a fellow worker, Jerry Lee Duncan, 25, were working in a zinc mine at Gordonsville, Tenn., when a sheet of metal metal being lowered into the shaft broke loose. Duncan was directly below.

"It sounded like a hammer," he said. "It fell about 1,000 feet and it was hitting the sides of the shaft."

He said he ran toward Duncan and bumped him hard enough to get the bulk of his body out of the way. But the plate severed Duncan's right arm, mangling it severely enough to prevent reimplantation.

"The next thing I knew my face was against the steel and I was hurting real bad," Jackson said. "I tried to push myself up with my left hand and I couldn't. I figured I'd try to use my right, but I looked over and I saw my right arm wasn't there.

"Then I heard everyone hollering that my arms had fallen to the bottom.

"I remember them putting my arms in a bucket and I closed my eyes 'cause I didn't want to see them," he said.

After the operation he awoke to find his arms were back in place.

"I was happy when I saw that," he said. "I'm just thankful there's a place like this."

Business hot for lighters of firecrackers

BROOKFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Business is booming for firecracker lighters who will set off displays marking the nation's 200th Fourth of July.

But for this Fairfield County community and other towns throughout the country, it could mean a quiet bicentennial Fourth of July.

The Brookfield Bicentennial Committee has found that local officials with forethought booked fireworks displays and operators as early as last July.

"I would say probably all available shooters are already taken for July Fourth," said Roy Trout, president of the American Pyrotechnics Association in Texas. He said most firework companies were booked up by last August or September.

In Newtown, another Fairfield County town, the chairman of the fireworks committee spent four hours on the telephone recently before he could get an order filled.

"I had to call all over the country. I finally located a firm in Ohio who said they would confirm our order. I don't care how much they cost. I'll pay for them myself if I have to, but I've got 'em," said Dr. Harvey Wachsman, chairman.

But in Saybrook, N.H., a spokesman for Rockingham Fireworks, one of about six distributors in New England, said:

"For the Fourth of July, forget it. We have had to turn down 50 requests this week."

The 138 fireworks shooters who are licensed by Connecticut are booked up for July 3, 4 and 5. The Brookfield Bicentennial Committee has even asked its state representative if the state legislature can ease licensing requirements for just one week.

Brookfield has found a company that will supply fireworks but it's still in the dark about where to find a "shooter."

Some fireworks companies are taking advantage of the law of supply and demand and are setting a $3,000 minimum on all contracts.

"Of course you could get them for $1,500 if you wanted a display for any other weekend but the Fourth," one supplier said.

And that is exactly how the town of New Fairfield got around the problem. They've scheduled the Fourth of July fireworks for July 14 or 15 to coincide with the arrival of the Armed Forces Bicentennial Caravan in town.

Massage parlor bawdy house ruling overturned

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Any sexual activity short of intercourse is not illegal in Missouri massage parlors under state laws against "maintaining a common bawdy house," the Missouri Court of Appeals ruled here Tuesday.

The court ruled in a case involving the Verboten Health Spa in St. Charles County. Prosecutors alleged that the spa offered messages that included "the touching, massaging and masturbation of the customers' genitals."

A three-judge panel reversed the conviction of the health spa's owner, Thomas E. Kayser. His business was raided and closed in August 1975 by St. Charles County sheriff's deputies. Kayser was found guilty in February 1976 and fined $500.

Deputies reported that two women employes, one 18 and the other 22, had offered them massages ranging in price from $15 to $55, depending on what sexual activities were involved.

The ruling did not decide the legality of local ordinances prohibiting masturbation for hire.

Writing for the court, Judge Harry L.C. Weier said Webster's Third New International Dictionary showed that a "bawdy house" is a house of habitation for "bawds." A "bawd" is "one who keeps a house of prostitution or a prostitute."

Because prostitution "is generally considered to be the act of permitting a common and indiscriminate sexual intercourse for hire," Weier reasoned that the Verboten was not subject to the bawdy house law because there was no proof intercourse had occurred there.

"The time honored definition of a bawdy house does not encompass the activities carried on in the Verboten Health Spa," Weier said.

"No matter how much we may deprecate and condemn those activities, we cannot classify them in the same category as those defined in the setting up and maintaining of a bawdy house."

Questions chest pains

DEAR DR. LAMB — For the past four to five years I have been troubled by heart poundings and palpitations, chest heaviness and sometimes chest pain under my front lower ribs, after exercising or after emotional or physical stress. I have consulted and have confidence in our two internists. They have done electrocardiograms while I was resting and after exercise, given a stress test, done blood work, tried Isordil on a temporary basis and have declared me a healthy middle-aged woman.

I'm 51 years old, 5 feet 8 and weigh 148 pounds. My blood pressure is 110 over 70. I had a complete hysterectomy in 1969. My parents are living, aged 78. My grandparents died of heart disease in their 80s.

Exercise is a part of our family. We swim year round, play tennis, walk and I ride a bike. Our habits are moderate and we do not smoke or do a thing in excess. We have la dolce vita.

Why then do these feelings persist? When it happens I try to ease off the exercise for a day or two and then do feel better. I also get some relief by taking two aspirin or a Valium at night when the palpitations interfere with sleep. They are getting worse and I am beginning to treat myself like an invalid and have almost stopped participating in these sports which I love.

My husband also has the same symptoms and he, too, has checked out in perfect health. What to do? Is there something we may be doing to cause this? Are we overdoing the exercise department? I would be grateful for your help.

DEAR READER — With the good evaluation you describe it is unlikely that there is anything seriously wrong with your heart. Palpitations and even certain forms of chest discomfort with the palpitations can occur in people who have no heart disease at all. Nevertheless, the sensations you describe are discomforting to say the least and they are real.

Exercise seldom produces such symptoms in healthy people except in people who really are overdoing it beyond the level of their physical fitness. We could take an office worker and have him do too much exercise too soon and he could develop such symptoms. He could accomplish the same level of fitness without symptoms if he progresses at a slower rate, taking months instead of weeks to get in shape.

Coffee and other drinks containing caffeine may be a factor. Since you don't smoke you can forget about cigarettes as a cause. Digestive disorders can trigger such attacks in some people. You need to be sure you don't have a hiatal hernia (hernia of part of the stomach through the diaphragm) and make some effort to correct any digestive disorders you may have such as spastic colon with trapping of gas. A good diet including adequate amounts of cereal bulk should help in that department.

Anxiety and nervousness can contribute to such attacks. A tranquilizer in these instances may help. Regular vigorous exercise may be associated with a slight decrease in potassium content which may be your problem. This can be important. To prevent this, an 8-ounce glass of orange juice a day will keep your potassium levels up.

To give you more information on palpitations I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-12, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats, Tachycardias. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.
